been, or as generous as Virginia and other sister states, North Carolina is apparently falling short of her quota, although this quota is only two-thirds of one per cent of the national quota. The quota of Virginia is one per cent of the national quota, and a successful campaign is now under way in that state.

"I believe the people of North Carolina will rally to this great cause," declares Governor Long, "for I can hardly see how they could neglect so great an opportunity for service. Armenians and Turks alike are being educated through the six colleges of the Near East College Association, and the gospel of Christ is being spread through the medium of education. Leaders are being educated to lead these people in the Near East out of their yoke of bondage which has held them for so many centuries, and it is only through the aid of Americans and North Carolinians that this work can be continued. Turks, Bulgarians, Syrians, Armenians, Greeks, Palestinians, and Jews are being educated then Christianized through these six colleges, and over three thousand homes are being influenced through these institutions, directly each year. The six colleges who have pooled their interests toward securing funds for operations from Christians in America are; Athens College, International College of Smyrna, Sofia American Schools, Robert College at Constantinople, Constantinople Woman's College, and the American University of Beirut.

Regularly each year since their foundation, these colleges have sent forth their graduates imbued with the spirit and courage of Christian idealism and trained for effective service—educational, medical, social and civic.

It is only through the financial aid of Americans that this service can be continued, and North Carolinians have been called upon to furnish a small share of this support. Leaders in religious, civic, business, and public life over America have interested themselves in this work, and Governor Long expresses the hope that the people of the Old North State will fall in line with these.

RAILROADS MORE EFFICIENT NOW.

ond is the cost of material. These two things shot out of sight, and it is only of late that the roads have been able to catch up with themselves, and this has been possible by a system of economy, of tremendously increased efficiency in every thing used by the roads, and of the utilization of every device for aiding production that can be devised. He referred to the item of lumber as an example. His work calls for about 70 million feet of lumber annually in ties, building stuff, and a thousand various items. Before the war ties were expected to last five, six, eight or ten years. Today the roads would be bankrupted if they could not get ties to last longer, so by creosoting, the life of the tie has been brought up to twelve, to fifteen, to twenty, and some of them now are promising 25 years. This makes a big difference in the use of lumber. It is so with every thing. Where the first train on the New York Central was hauled five miles an hour by an engine weighing three tons, loads now reach 100 tons to the single car and speed, service and safety have never been equalled. High wages are paid, business is served, and costs are now not much different to the traveler than when low wages prevailed, and the roads are now wholly different from the roads of a dozen years ago. He was received with much interest.

The question of road signs was discussed again, and the fight against them will go on, relying on the hope of bringing public sentiment to the help of the highway as against the signs.

place but they can never have the opportunity of protecting our natural resources because the speed that we are setting along all lines of waste our forest will be far from what their needs will demand.

The people of Moore County are to be commended for their splendid cooperation in assisting the department in suppression of forest fires. I am predicting in the near future that instead of one week set aside for this work of nature that we will have 52 weeks of interest manifested along these lines because every boy and girl will have the advantages of being instructed in our public schools and colleges along with agriculture, stock-raising and other practical vocations. Then too we will probably develop someone that can assist Mr. J. McN. Johnson in expounding the gospel of Forestry. So far Mr. Johnson is the first and only man that has seen fit to give his time and talents to importing to the people of Moore County the much needed information about our depleted forest. A record of his letters is being kept on file by the department for the scientific knowledge contained in them. Surely the pen is mightier than the sword."

Protect the trees that are here and plant more.

Thomas Kidd, of Highfalls, Mrs. Hurley Purvis of Bennett; Floyd Brewer, of Siler City; Fred and Grady Brewer, of Highfalls and G. E. Brewer of Carthage.

He is survived by his children also two sisters and two brothers, and a host of friends.

He was a loyal member of the Fall Creek Baptist church since early childhood and was always ready to do his part in any kind of church work.

Funeral services were conducted at Fall Creek church by his pastor, Rev. J. C. Kidd, of Bennett, assisted by Rev. Mr. Pickett, of Highfalls and Rev. Mr. McFarland, of Elton College. The Jr. O. U. A. M., Deep River Council No. 306 of Highfalls of which he was a faithful member concluded the funeral services at the cemetery and his remains were laid to rest in Fall Creek cemetery. The many and beautiful floral offerings, and the large attendance marked the esteemed friendship in which Mr. Brewer was held.

ARCHERS COMPANY RUNS TWO SHIFTS.

equipment has been worked to the utmost, it has been decided that the only way to satisfy the demands of the trade has been to work seven-teen hours a day.

Another one of the new departures of the Archers Company is the new Arrow Box, containing a full dozen arrows so arranged that there are no loose parts to become misplaced when the arrows have been taken out, yet every arrow is automatically freed for use by the raising of the box lid. This is said to be the first radical change in methods of packing arrows in five hundred years, as the previous method commonly used was almost identical with the way in which the Yeoman of old carried their spare arrows in time of war. At that time a spare box of arrows was called a sheaf and as a rule held twenty four war arrows.

Archery is rapidly becoming one of the major sports of the day and it is rumored that Mrs. Phillip Rounseville and her assistant, Miss Maxine Schadenberger who has been instructing at the Pinehurst Country Club this winter have offered their services to a selected list of Northern country clubs during part of the summer season. A very interesting account in which bows and arrows are made at the Guild Shop of the Archers Company is described in the May issue of the Scientific American.

THE TREES OF MOORE COUNTY

Linnaeus because of this similarity. The Robinia part of the name was given in honor of the French Botanist, Robin.

The Black Locust bears its seeds in a pod, four or five inches long, with some half a dozen very hard seed to each pod. The pods burst when they are ripe in autumn; but most of the seeds still adhere to the edges of the bursted hull even after they have fallen to the ground, and the wind carries them forth "on the half-shell" for long distances, thus scattering them on the earth for reforestation. This tree is armed with sharp spines that used to serve our Scottish Ancestors as Shawl Pins for their "Paisley Shawls."

The wood has great lasting quality, and makes ideal fence posts. We are told the wood of this tree makes the best insulator brackets for telephone poles, but farmers have a dread of this tree because of its numerous sprouts from the roots for acres around a large tree or a new stump.

HONEY LOCUST: Gleditsia Triacanthos—Called in some sections of the country, "St. John's Bread" from the erroneous idea that the "Locust" eaten by John, the Baptist while a recluse in the wilderness, was the fruit of this tree; but our Biblical Scholars tell us that St. John actually fared forth on a bug like that we now call The Seventeen Year Locust.

Like the Black Locust, the Honey Locust, has small leaves pointed at both ends, but crowded more thickly on the stem than the Black Locust leaves. It also has sharp thorns, much larger than the thorns of the Black Locust! and these thorns are often branched themselves—several thorns on a thorn.

The name of the Honey Locust is given because of the thick viscid mucilaginous substance that surrounds (Please turn to page 3)

Another Sale.

The Pilot is in receipt of the following letter:

Aberdeen, April 26, 1928.

Dear Mr. Brewer:

Please let the readers of your valuable paper know that next week I am going to have a full page "Ad." in The Pilot giving full details of our final auction sale of "Mid-Towns Sub-division" lots on the highway between Aberdeen and Southern Pines.

We have had wonderful success in the sale of these lots out here since Mr. Seymour took the property over; 375 of them have been conveyed already and almost every day new purchasers show up. They are moving more rapidly than either Mr. Seymour or I even hoped in the beginning.

On Friday, May 11, we are going to have our final auction sale and at this sale we are going to give away a brand new Chevrolet Sedan and seven more building lots absolutely free. I hope you can make it convenient to be with us on this date because I feel like we are going to have an enormous crowd from all over this entire section.
