This looks like a good season for the Sandhills. Cotton is a little off, but tobacco is bringing a good price, farm crops are not as bad as they might have been, the winter visitors are beginning to arrive, and the prospects generally are that more money will be moving than was anticipated.

The thing for all of us to do is to profits by the lessons of the past and to pay our debts as fast as possible, buy prudently the things we need, save a portion of our incomes for such emergencies as we see are bound to come, and to plan for better things in the days ahead.

Put your valuable documents in a safe deposit box in the bank vaults, and your money that are not using in the custoday of the bank. Make everything safe for the present and the future.

Night on Weymouth Heights

A traveler driving in toward Southern Pines from out the Fort Bragg way remarked that he rarely ever saw a prettier picture than the lights along the top of the ridge as evening calls for turning on the electric lamps in the homes.

From the hills far out the circle of illumination breaks through the fringe of pine trees, and it is a pretty sight.

Then in the Day Time from out in the same section the riders get glimpses of the white paint and the red chimneys of the homes on Weymouth ridge, sheltered by the forest growth, topped by the foliage high on the summit.

But always that picture. And every new Weymouth home adds to the pleasure of the spectacle.

Everybody Cannot Have a Big Country Estate

Like Verner Reed's, or John Warren Watson's, or Burrell White's, or the Barber estate, for there is not enough ground in this section to provide such vast holdings.

BUT EVERYBODY CAN HAVE

A smaller rural tract, Five Acres, Ten Acres, or such similar latitude for a smaller country home.

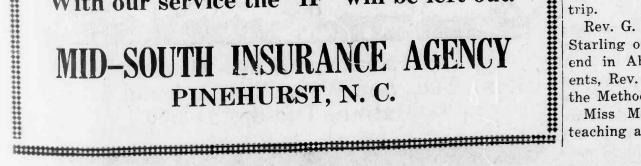

And the beauty of it is that with these progressive men making such magnificent country homes and places those of us who want smaller country homes away from the limited area of the villages can have our smaller country holdings amid the bigger ones, and thereby enjoy all the advantages of the delightful country touch that the big fellows are providing.

The Midland Farms Area

Out there near the Barber estate, or on the other side of the Midland Road.

Near the White property or the Way farm, or the Knollwood village, convenient to the villages, with the big rural estates as neighbors and certain of the improvements the big men make, are home sites that will be invaluable.
