participating in an affray, found guilty and each fined $25 and costs.

Truby pleaded guilty to involuntary transportation of liquor and was given a suspended sentence of four months and a $25 fine as being the innocent victim in the affair. William Milam will appeal the case to Superior Court if he can arrange bond, it is said.

Wierd Tales of Turkey, Deer and Wolves Are Coming Out of Fort Bragg Area

Increase In Wild Life on Huge Military Reservation Is Causing An Overflow Into Surrounding Areas and Is Giving Rise to Hunting Stories Some of Which Need a Little Sale

Fort Bragg is an interesting factor in Sandhills life for many reasons, one being the large acreage of untillied land, much of it forest, that is the neighbor of the settlements that comprise the resort villages. From that big acreage of forest-covered land issues much wild life along with that which roams and lives in the woods of the big reservation, giving to the country adjacent to the reservation a great reservoir of game supply. As hunting is not allowed in the government territory except perhaps by the military and possibly some friends, the big source of supply is steadily overflowing. That makes it possible to create hunting stories and other tales of more or less wierd character, some of them undoubtedly true, and some no doubt in need of a little salt to make them savory if we are to listen to them. Not long ago two men driving less than half a mile beyond the boundary line of Southern Pines saw a wild turkey fly across the road and into the thicket beyond. The same two men ran into a flock in the woods a little farther out within the past two weeks. Sunday morning a man rambling about on the hills not out of sight of Southern Pines saw the tracks where two or three deer had crossed the road some distance off the reservation. Many a rural table last winter had venison among its viands, killed outside of the camp lines legitimately—and maybe some inside not legitimately.

Reports by the grape-vine telegraph this summer tell that the prospect for a deer crop is not so good as last season. For one thing stray dogs are said to be killing the fawns. Folks who drift around the boundary and occasionally inside the reservation tell that many dogs are roaming out that way, some of them big ones. Rather creditable sources of information tell that two or three wildcats of considerable size have been killed in the neighborhood of the border line in the past two or three years. Not long ago some men fishing on the north side of James Creek saw what they say were wolves. Wolves have not been known in this section in a long time, and some of the old-timers incline to the belief that the wolves on James

Creek may have been dogs that have run wild on the range, although the reports say the men had a fairly good look at the animals.

Quail Plentiful

Quail are reported more abundant this summer than for a few years in the country along the Fort Bragg line, probably because shooting out that way is almost wholly stopped by the landowners who are undertaking to restore the wild life. Squirrels seem to have grown much fewer in number, and rabbits, at times in the past a pestiferous nuisance, have dwindled in numbers to such an extent that not many are seen by the driver on the country roads or the rambler through the woods. Last winter, for the first time in years, hunters complained of a scarcity of rabbits in the eastern part of the county. By some it is figured that foxes have had something to do with the decrease in rabbits, and foxes have been accused of killing young fawns, and also of keeping the turkey crop less than it would be were the foxes not so many.

Then again, the multiplication of deer out the Fort Bragg way has interfered with the fox chasing, as the hounds on the fox trail frequently pick up a deer track and leave the fox to go after the bigger game. That curls the hair of the hunt, for fox hunters do not want to follow a deer track, and are not allowed to if they wanted to. So the changes in the Fort Bragg area and vicinity are interesting in their innovations.

VERNER Z. REED TO REMODEL RESIDENCE

Verner Z. Reed Jr. is making a number of changes in his new residence at the end of Linden Road, near Pinehurst. Mr. MacKenzie, a New York architect, was here this week to supervise the construction. The living room is to be altered to provide a morning room and library, it is understood, and a number of other minor changes will be made in the present arrangements of rooms. The Reed house is one of the largest and most pretentious homes in the Sandhills. Mr. and Mrs. Reed are spending the summer in Newport.

Theatre

"Son Of India," in which Ramon Novarro is starred, and which is the attraction at the Carolina Theatre this Thursday, Friday and Saturday, is said to be Novarro's greatest role since "The Pagan." It is an adaptation of F. Marion Crawford's well known novel, "Mr. Isaacs."

A really all-star cast, including Conrad Nagel, Madge Evans, Marjorie Rambeau and C. Aubry Smith, Mitchell Lewis and John Miljan is supporting Mr. Novarro.

Miss Madge Evans is a new star just recruited from the Broadway stage where she recently starred in the stage production, "Philip Goes Forth."

Paramount has correctly sensed the public taste for Paul Lukas' effective acting. For his parent company has placed him in the most significant role of his career in "Women Love Once," and adaptation of Zoe Akins' state success, "Daddy's Gone A-Hunting," which is the attraction at the Carolina Theatre Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday with a matinee Tuesday at 3:00 p. m. Paul Lukas can act. He is an actor who has studied his work, knows it well—and loves to exhibit his skill. In addition, he has an engaging personality which you feel would be, of itself, enough to fascinate the thousands who lift their faces to the silver screen. As the loyal wife and mother in "Women Love Once," Eleanor Boardman is also provided with a very powerful role, one of the most important in her career. She is the central feminine interest in a story that is crammed full with dramatic intensity.

"Women Love Once" is the story of a happy family whose placid contentment is all but dispelled by the force of worldly circumstances.

HUNDREDS AT 4-H CLUB PICNIC AT LAKEVIEW

The 4-H Clubs of Moore and Lee counties met at Lakeview Tuesday for an all-day picnic. Several hundred were in attendance. There were sixty-five from Cameron and vicinity present, probably the largest number from any one place.

Aberdeen Girl Hurt In Collision of Cars

Miss Leta McBride Suffers Fractured Knee Cap in Auto Mishap

Miss Leta McBride of Aberdeen, stenographer to J. Vance Rowe, attorney, had her knee cap broken in an automobile accident last Friday when the Ford roadster in which she was riding collided with a Ford roadster owned by Ed Swearingen of Aberdeen, and driven by New Armstrong, a Negro, on Route 50 about one mile from town and near Henry Addors' filling station.

Miss McBride, in company with Mr. Rowe was returning from a business trip to Addor, their car being on the right side of the road, and an oil truck approaching on the right. Armstrong came up behind the truck and decided to pass the truck. His car, in gaining the center of the road, side-swiped Mr. Rowe's car. The force of the collision threw Miss McBride violently against the front of the car, fracturing her knee cap.
