

Pinehurst Paragraphs

Rally Day was observed in all departments of the Community Church Sunday School on last Sunday morning with attractive programs and some increase in attendance, the latter reaching two hundred and twenty-four. Supt. W. P. Morton and his wide-awake co-workers keep the attendance at a high mark the year 'round—so the feature of the day was the feeling that there was still unimposed territory which challenged every worker and offered fields for christian social service during the trying winter months. The assembly of the school in the Brotherhood room was particularly inspiring. Special songs by the small children brought the exercises to a close.

The people of the community had a real treat this week in the classes which were conducted in the Community Church each evening from Monday through Friday by Claude T. Carr, Director of Religious Education in the Synod of North Carolina. Mr. Carr held similar classes here last year at which time the course of lectures was based on "The Teacher," and credits were awarded all who completed the course. "The Growth of Christian Personality," a study of the pupil, was the text book used this week. A very large class has taken advantage of this presentation of child psychology by one unsurpassed in his line.

Narrow Escape

Eleven Thousand Volts of Electricity Loosed When Carolina Main Line is Cut

Eleven thousand volts of electricity played around loose on the road between Aberdeen and Pinehurst near the Aberdeen Sand Company pits Sunday afternoon late when a boom of the big drag line equipment of the company fell across the main line of the Carolina Power & Light Company, snapping it in two. Fortunately, although a large number of men were at work moving the drag line across the highway, no one was injured. Aberdeen and Pinehurst were thrown into darkness with their current shut off from the big plant north of Pinehurst, and Southern Pines was in semi darkness, getting what light it could from its auxiliary plant until the main line had been repaired.

The snapping of the line caused a burst of flame to shoot up from the highway and play about the drag line equipment until the current was grounded. Ralph Chandler, manager of the Carolina Power & Light Company, states it was almost miraculous that no one was injured.

20 Boys Enroll as Boy Scout Nucleus

Scoutmaster Backer Starts Work of Reorganizing Southern Pines Troop

On Friday evening at the Scout Hut, Troop No. 3 of Southern Pines held its first meeting with Scoutmaster Max Backer, following the plan to reorganize. About twenty boys expressed their desire to build up the troop and it is believed that there will be enough boys join in the next week or two to bring the troop up to full roster.

There is fine material registered which will provide leadership for the individual patrols, but it will take time to coordinate and develop the troop into what it was when it was the champion troop of Walter Hines Page Council in 1929 and 1930.

The present task is to place each scout in his merited rank so as to begin from some tangible starting point and build up from there.

The troop was pleased at its first meeting to welcome Dr. Prizer as a visitor. The grown folks are always welcome at the scout meetings, says Mr. Backer.

Repairs have been made to the Scout Hut under the leadership of a committee composed of George Moore, Ralph Chandler and Frank Buchan. A number of scouts on Saturday morning went diligently at the task of ing went diligently at the task of one looked sharp enough the chairman of the above committee could be seen busily sawing dead limbs from the trees in front of the hut.

The meeting this week will be held on Thursday evening at 7:30 in place of Friday, the regular night, to allow Scoutmaster Backer, who holds a state office in the American Legion, to attend the official welcome at Charlotte to National Commander Henry L. Stevens.

OLD DAYS DEPICTED BY HEMP FAIR EXHIBITS

line being responsible for a revival of the potter's art in this section. Mr. and Mrs. Busbee are untiring in their efforts to explain a bit of local history attached to each particular item on display.

Among the more interesting of these antiques are several old cards, spinning wheels and reels and a home-made hand loom more than 100 years old, on which the old time, hand-woven cloth known as linsey-woolsey is being made daily for the edification of the spectators. The original English linsey-woolsey was composed of a linen warp with a wool filling, hence the name, but the Moore county product is made with a cotton warp and a wool filling, both grown in the vicinity. The entire process from raw material to finish cloth is demonstrated by elderly women of the community who are thoroughly experienced in this almost forgotten art. Numbers of dresses, voluminous petticoats (antiques in themselves) and suits of men's clothing, all made of this old time material, according to the styles of another day, are on display. Many hand-woven coverlets and aged patchwork quilts, attractively arranged, serve as a background for the various other articles being exhibited.

Other items among the antiques include a display of old crockery, entered by Mrs. J. A. Price, matron of the Quaker Children's Home of McConnell, together with a four-poster corded bed and a ladder-back chair.

War Days Recalled

Another interesting relic of former times is a muzzle-loading rifle manufactured prior to the Civil War by

A. Kennedy of Mechanics Hill, who operated a gun factory near Hemp on the old plank road which ran from Stokes and Surry counties to Fayetteville. One of the original board from this old road is also shown. A pair of spectacles 200 years old, a powder horn used during the War of 1812, a hat worn during the Civil War, a 130-year old violin and a flax wheel bearing the date of 1816 are merely a few of the other relics on display.

W. N. Kidd of McConnell is present with a quantity of native ores collected in the vicinity, which he is confident contains gold, silver and copper in commercial quantities.

Edwin A. West, the genial principal of Elise Academy, of Hemp is on hand to extol the undoubted virtues of individualized instruction as practiced in this school.

In very marked contrast with the exhibition of hand-woven linsey-woolsey, is the display of the Pinehurst Silk Mills, whose large manufacturing plant is one of the main-stays of Hemp. Their showing of multi-colored thread and rayon weaves in beautiful designs is a most pleasing one.

An additional Moore county produce on display is two brands of patented soap powder and a talcum powder being manufactured at the talc mines near Hemp by the Vandeur Co., of New York city and Hemp, the native tale being used as a filler in both the soap powder and the talcum powder.

"Outside" products on display is a furniture booth by the Carter Furniture Co., of Sanford, whose radio brought in the World Series baseball game. The Carthage Motor Co. is showing a spick and span, late model Ford.

The entertainment features of the fair are being taken care of by Cloth's Greater Shows, with a good collection of riding devices, midway shows and concessions. Free acts and a daily balloon ascension add the finishing touches which make each day complete.

This is Hemp's first exhibition showing the resources and advantages of the community and Hemp "has done herself proud." Those sponsoring the fair are to be congratulated upon its excellence.

Dr. Henry Lewis Smith to Preach at Bethesda Home-Coming Oct. 18

President-Emeritus of Davidson and Judge Shaw of Greensboro on the Program

Dr. Henry Lewis Smith, president-emeritus of Davidson College and Washington and Lee University, will be the morning preacher at the home coming celebration at Old Bethesda Church on Sunday, October 18th, the Rev. E. L. Barber announced this week. The afternoon preacher will be Judge Thomas J. Shaw of Greensboro, a son of the old church and a brother of Mrs. Robert N. Page of Aberdeen. His brother, Dr. Angus Shaw of Charlotte, preached at last year's home coming.

An all-day program is being arranged for the big home coming at Moore county's historic edifice on the heights overlooking Aberdeen. As is the custom, dinner, picnic fashion, will be served on the grounds, and the public is cordially invited to attend and bring baskets of food.

Bethesda's home coming is one of the events of the year looked forward to by residents of this section to whom the old church has meant so much, not only to themselves but to their forebears. No church has played a greater part in the life of the community than this century-old society, and it is dear to the hearts of hundreds of families in Moore and adjacent counties. A more complete program of arrangements for the day will appear in next week's issue of The Pilot.
