Preparing for Winter Now Will Aid in Solving Unemployment Problem

With Increased Purchasing Power of the Dollar, Much Work of Improvement, Repair and Addition to Homes Can Be Done Cheaply and Charitably

With the near approach of November, there can be no doubt that winter is just around the corner and these "near-frosty" mornings serve as reminders of this fact.

Those so fortunate as to be privileged to enjoy the glorious sunshine with which these Sandhills are ordinarily blessed, are reluctant to admit that ere long an occasional blast of wintry weather will visit this section bringing with it discomfort and in a few instances actual suffering among the unemployed. This situation can be greatly relieved by concerted action in the matter of spending. Wise expenditures at the present low prices of all kinds of commodities—the lowest they have been since 1919—will necessarily help to stabilize business.

Surely there is some odd job around the house or garage or place of business that needs care and attention. Something that needs fixing; something that needs remodeling before the winter sets in. Check over your plumbing and electric wiring; correct heating plant defects or install an automatic firing device and save both trouble and fuel; weatherstrip for comfort and addition fuel savings; fill the coal bin now; beautify your premises by having your lawn sowed, your grounds cleaned up and your planting cared for and extended; have that paint job looked after; and needed repairs to buildings are always numerous. Why not have the work done immediately and at low cost? Purchasing the materials and employing the labor will help just that much towards relieving present conditions. It means incomes for families; more business for merchants and dealers in building material; it produces orders for factories and mines and in turn helps their employees.

Now that desirable building locations can be so easily and cheaply procured, and building materials are at such a low price, no better time could be chosen for the construction of a new home or office or business house. And plenty of idle workers are awaiting the call.

Buy and save! Not for many years has the purchasing power of a dollar been so great, and by careful spending it can be made to stretch even farther. This is a day of bargains in all lines—labor, supplies and materials—due to the fact that during the past several years, in the race between production and consumption, production has been far in the lead. As surplus stocks are absorbed, and business turns upward, prices must of necessity rise again.

Present low prices in nowise signify a lowering of quality. In fact just the reverse is true since competition in all lines has resulted in better grade merchandise. Those engaged in slipshod, careless methods of conducting business have long since passed out.

Buy NOW and save! It's the circulating dollar that counts, not the one that's hoarded. You will have to buy eventually and it's a real pleasure at present-day prices.
