

Rev. A. S. Lawrence to Hold Mission Here

Rector of Chapel of the Cross at Chapel Hill Coming to Southern Pines Nov. 22

The Sandhills will have the privilege of hearing the Rev. Alfred S. Lawrence, rector of the Chapel of the Cross, Chapel Hill, at Emmanuel Episcopal Church, Southern Pines, on November 22nd and 23rd.

Mr. Lawrence comes to Emmanuel Church to hold a two-day mission in connection with the south-wide Teaching Mission on the Great Commission now being held throughout the Episcopal Church in the southeastern states. The leaders of this mission are the Bishops of the Province of Seawane and prominent clergymen selected by them and trained last spring in three Regional Training schools under the best faculty obtainable.

This is a well organized movement to re-study and re-learn and re-apply the principles of Christian duty and service involved in Christ's last command. Its purpose is to present in an attractive way the fundamental principles of Christian belief and practice, and to teach definite, concrete facts about the work of the Church in the world.

Mr. Lawrence is well known throughout the state for his excellent work among the students at Chapel Hill and is an interesting and attractive speaker. It is hoped that many people of the Sandhills will avail themselves of this opportunity to hear him.

The schedule of the meetings will be published at an early date.

Dividend Printing

- There is one kind of printing that you want—printing that pays a dividend on the investment.
- A letterhead with right sort of type properly balanced is a real business asset. It wins the approval of the person receiving your letter, and while he is in this frame of mind your letter is read.
- The same reasoning applies to any other job of printing. Neatness, the right weight and kind of paper, the color of the ink, the selection of the type, all play an important part in the production of dividend printing.

We are equipped to give you that kind of printing. Let us prove it to you.

tion down the center aisle, followed by the bridesmaids, Miss Eddy and Mrs. Edson being followed by Miss Stutz and Mrs. Ruggles. Behind the bridesmaids came the maid of honor, followed by the flower girls strewing the path with rose petals from their baskets. The bride entered on the arm of her brother, who gave her away. The Rev. Elmer Willis Serl performed the ceremony.

Before the marriage service, Mrs. Raymond Kennedy sang two solos, "I Love You Truly," and "At Dawning," after which Mrs. Charles Grey at the organ rendered the wedding march by Lohengrin.

A wedding reception was held after the ceremony at the home of the bride, the wedding party and a few intimate friends of the young couple being the only guests. A large wedding cake surrounded by pink candles graced the center of the bridal table. Mrs. David Hoskins presided at the punch table, assisted by Mrs. E. C. Eddy and Mrs. Edson.

After Miss Doris Eddy had caught the bridal bouquet thrown by the bride, Mr. and Mrs. Hoskins left on a wedding trip of ten days, the bride stunningly attired in a brown crepe traveling dress with accessories to match, a brown coat and hat. Upon their return they are to make their home for the present in an apartment in the bank building.

Mrs. Hoskins has been employed in the office of the Carolina Power and Light Company for some time, while Mr. Hoskins is an efficient employe of the Southern Pines postoffice.

Claude Hayes a Vital Factor in Field of Education in Sandhills

Head of Book Store On Road To Recovery After Serious Illness of Several Weeks

By Bion H. Butler

One time, several years ago, Dr. Evan Kane, the eminent physician was exceedingly sick, and his death expected almost any hour. This humble historian wrote a beautiful epiobituary, and had it put in type waiting the end. But good old Doctor Evan got well, and is still well and active and serving his suffering friends and neighbors.

All of which is introduced merely as an apology for writing and printing another obituary, for it is a shame to waste things like these after they have been ciphered out.

Claude Hyges has been sick, so sick that folks have been feeling in their pockets to see if they have enough money to pay for flowers. And he has got fairly on the road to health again, and his friends are appreciating his efforts to save them the outlay. Claude Hayes was born to be an educator. He found the field in a book store, which is the greatest force for education with the one signal factor of experience. You could not make the story of Hayes complete without starting at the beginning of education.

It seems that a chap called Cadmus set out ages ago, and not knowing just what he was after he asked the oracle at Delphi for advice. The oracle proposed to him to follow a cow, which he did, and where the cow laid down Cadmus built a city which he called Thebes. Why he didn't go to Indiana at the start no one knows, for no one knows why the cow stopped at Thebes. Probably to far to walk across the sea. But any way Cadmus built the city, and later he became a great inventor and from him the Greeks learned to read and write. That is where Cadmus and Hayes tie in together. Hayes was really from Indiana, but Cadmus was dead before Hayes knew anything about him. Education in Indiana reached up to the count of five which is the number of voters in the blocks that were standard when the votes were delivered at the polls. Tom Taggart and French Lick Springs, and the Bank of the Wabash, and some novel politics and a lot of book writers came from Indiana, for something in the air seems to run that way. Hayes landed in Southern Pines when he came, which was a long time ago. He is suspected of being a Republican. He started young to read Beadle's Dime Novels, and as he picked up information he grew more addicted to the book habit, and now he knows almost everything, for books contain the amassed knowledge of the world for ages.

"He Sawed the Wood"
The Hayes book store and the Ross golf courses are the signs the aviators look for as they try to locate the Sandhills. He married a wife who is the best merchandiser in the original thirteen colonies. Between them they make this neighborhood the best read

Here we are again, all set and ready to go into the season of 1931-32.

For weeks past the sound of the saw and the hammer have been heard in the land accompanied and followed by the rhythmic plomp, plomp of the painter's brush applying finishing touches to new work and brightening up the old.

Shrubbery has been pruned, lawns seeded, gardens raked, while the air was redolent with the pungent odor of burning leaves, until now all is in readiness for the advent of the hordes of migratory germs homo, who will abandon their summer habitat to escape the coming blizzards in the north by spending the winter in the Sandhills.

And a warm welcome awaits. Already, there are more permanent winter residents domiciled in the section than ever before at the same time of year, and the Bank of Pinehurst extends hearty greetings to its old friends and patrons, while it looks forward with pleasant anticipation to making the acquaintance of those who will come for the first time, to whom it extends a cordial invitation to avail themselves of its facilities and service by establishing here a real bank home.

and the best dressed community of its size in the list of towns covered by the census. Hayes thinks he can play golf and it is unnecessary to disabuse his mind in that respect, for if a man is a great man it is no use to worry about his harmless foibles. His type of golf does no harm to any one. But it is safe to put money on this gamble. If Hayes had come sauntering up to the Pearly gates during his sickness and the usher had apprised St. Peter that a stranger from Southern Pines was knocking at the wicket, St. Peter would have advised to admit him if correct, and guaranteed his correctness, tucked the stranger's arm under his own, and led him away to a pretty fair location in the new territory. For fear I may beat him to the door, as neither of us is a spring chicken any more, this I propose to offer as a suitable scroll to be inscribed on his garter. "He sawed the wood." For a thirty-third degree bookstore man always leaves the world better than he found it.

COUNTY TAX SALE BRINGS UP MORE FINANCIAL TALK

The tax sales which took place this week and which should have been out of the way several weeks ago. The collector can now make settlement for the 1931 taxes, the county assuming the amount of delinquency. With these things all out of the way the new statements will be prepared and we can all arrange to receive a notice from Mr. McLean that he is ready to receive our money.

Here again enters a little bit of hopefulness, for there are those who say that the postponement of the 1931 taxes will probably lap over a period of improvement when people have more money. The prevailing sentiment is that with an abundant supply of things to eat and use on the farms and with the lower cost of things generally it is going to be easier in the next six or eight months to pay taxes than it has in the last similar period. The general taxes over the county for 1931 have been reduced approximately one-third. This cuts down the average of each man's taxes so much that it is argued by those who are familiar with court house affairs that the taxpayer when he gets his slip this winter will be so encouraged by the smaller size of the amount called for that he will make an effort to pay more promptly.

Light Blue Monday

So taking it all around Blue Monday didn't seem to have been as blue as might have been anticipated. The situation has just one serious thorn, and that is that the county is out of the use of the large amount of money involved in the delayed tax collection of 1930, a delay that precludes the use of the money for another year yet. Also the delay in getting out the tax books for the 1931 taxes puts off the receipt of the 1931 money for a time. To offset this dilemma anticipation tax notes are to be utilized, which means that the county is borrowing against its expected income when the taxes begin to come. This gives rise to the comment that the county is creating an additional debt to carry on its current expenses, and the fear is heard that an undesirable step is inviting further debt embarrassment. This is a delicate job on the shoulders of the commissioners, for they are obliged to carry on, and they must find the money to do it. Nevertheless, it is argued by some of the observers that we are increasing the county debt, experiencing a lessening of the tax income, and banking again on that dream of making the future pay our present shortages that we are increasing. And some folks suggest that we are riding for a further fall. It is predicted that a demand for cutting expenses will be heard before long, and that the farmer is going to have more to say about county finances. More light will be thrown on this phase of the situation when the 1931 taxes are called and the readiness of the response is seen.

WHEN A WORD SHAPES HISTORY!

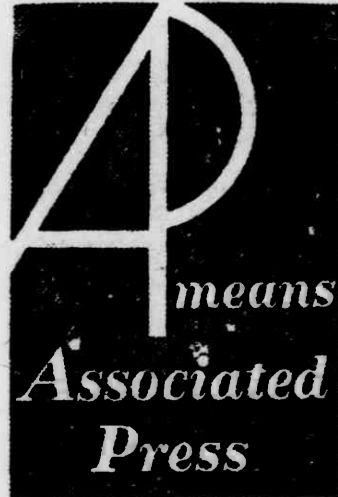

IN the heat of a political campaign, with a state or nation about to enter the polls, the reporter faces an unusually grave responsibility. From a detached viewpoint, he must be scrupulously fair and impartial, fearlessly accurate and thorough—for the decision of a sovereign people may hang on his words.

In reporting the news of politics, as of all other events, THE ASSOCIATED PRESS is interested only in the recording of facts, without bias or favor. Consistent adherence to this fundamental principle has created among the millions of readers of member newspapers a merited tradition of confidence.
