Festival Revives Memories of Old Days and Old Friends Here

Mrs. R. J. Morrison Writes from Cherryville of Recollections of Sandhills

The gathering of the old folks during the Spring Festival brought out a lot of history of the Sandhills, and along with the event comes a letter from Mrs. R. J. Morrison, of Cherryville, up in the mountain section. She says of some printed comment, "I was glad to note your mention of your friends (and mine), John Buchan, our old neighbor, Dear Mr. Buchan! Do you recall 'I says, says I?' As a child I remember when Dr. G. H. Saddleon lived at Manly and his lancing of my abscessed throat. Another event was my first day in school at Southern Pines, where Mrs. Ada Rockwell was the teacher. During that day Howard Saddleon was put in a corner wearing a dunce cap for misbehavior. George Kemp read about the 'Clucking Hen,' Carrie Poe gave a recitation with much feeling, 'It Might Have Been,' which impressed me very forcibly and sadly. Strange I should remember these things so vividly after all the years. I was eight years old at that time. "I recall the Widow Blue's old place the arrival through a lane, rail fences on either side, past a garden enclosed in a picket fence, and inside what a panorama of colored flowers— I can see the huge snowball bushes at the rear and masses of beds of brightly blossoming flowers, Sweet Williams, it seems, and portulaccas. Into the two-story house, under large trees, small bed rooms opening off of a large living room. I peeper into those small bedrooms and noticed the 'high' beds (to me then.) I was always served freshly baked light bread with delicious honey. Sitting on the front porch we saw a field of waving grain, spreading apple trees and a gay young colt capering. Wandering to the back of the house we saw where 'Uncle Abraham,' colored, had lived, and died from choking while eating a chicken gizzard.

"A Mrs. Meadowcraft from the North had spent some time at Mrs. Blue's with rooms up stairs and I heard my mother tell of her presenting me with a dainty dress as a natal birthday gift. "Near this old place was what we called the 'Mineral Spring,' where we had good times wading in clear water and enjoying the good drinking water, the like of which I have never tasted since. And how well I remember Peter Shaw. I saw him plowing and wearing an old time 'duster' as he plowed. On visiting at his home I can still all but see the dark parlor, a Sabbath-like stillness the horse-hair upholstering, (how I slid off those sleek chairs), and Oh, the awesomeness of that picture on the wall of the Reverend Evander McNair, with long-flowing white beard. Our entertainment was royal there. I saw there the first 'abacus' stereoscopic pictures, and at the Methodist church in Manly the first marriage I had ever witnessed, that of R. N. Page to Miss Flora Shaw. The flower girls wore pink hollyhocks pinned on their shoulders. "Strange memories come down with the years."

Very respectfully,
—GEORGE H. HUMBER.

Duke vs. Davidson

North Carolina Colleges To Play Here on Saturday of Next Year's Festival

A baseball game between Duke University and Davidson College on the Southern Pines diamond is practically assured for Saturday, April 13th, 1935 as a feature of next year's Spring Blossom Festival, the committee stated yesterday. These teams were scheduled to play that day in Davidson but it is said that both nines are agreeable to transferring the contest to Southern Pines.

A tennis match between the University of North Carolina and State College is being arranged for the morning of the 13th, as that day will be Sports Day on next year's program.

Barnsdall Imports Plants For Garden

Many Foreign Species Growing on Attractive Estate in Knollwood

T. N. Barnsdall's home at Knollwood is another of the interesting developments in that quarter. Mr. Barnsdall is an enthusiastic archer, and on the rear of his large piece of ground he maintains a modern shooting butt, fully equipped to carry on the sport. But it is hidden from the road by a highly interesting garden and lawn, the work of Mr. Morell along with Mr. Barnsdall, who is also a gardener on an amateur basis, and the two of them have a unique exhibition. With Morell's skill and knowledge as a botanist and planter and Barnsdall's taste for things of this sort and his acquaintance the world around, the two have gathered a variety of trees and shrubs and flowers (and made them grow) that is a rarity on a small area of ground. The contributions come from all over the globe, but conditions have been made so enticing for them here in the sand that they grow as cheerfully as though they were in their native soils of China, South America, Europe, Africa or elsewhere.

A list of the varieties shows about a hundred different kinds of plants.

Some of the strangers in this community are Japanese Holly, Indian Hawthorn, Chinese Tea, Japanese Acuba, Italian Cypress, Texas Arborvitae, Cork Bark Oak, Japanese Evergreen Oak, Japanese Black and Red Pines, Cedar of Lebanon, Greek Juniper, Chinese Firethorn, Spanish Broom, Korean Spirea, English Juniper, and many other interesting and curious things. With these is a long list of plants native to this continent, but from other sections. And the feature of note is that Morell has them all growing. Mr. Barnsdall's example is a helpful factor in the Sandhills, for it is showing folks how to add to the range of their home and garden embellishment. It is another straw that points the direction of the wind not only at Knollwood but in all the Sandhills country.

BIRD CLUB NOTES

A little patience, more time, a pair of good eyes or ears with an eager mind to use them, and anyone is fully equipped for enjoyment these days if he or she can get outdoors. Some spots are better than others but it may be truly said there is not one block in Southern Pines which will not provide sight and sound of happy bird life and beauty of flower and foliage, plenty of the latter. On Tuesday the Bird Club offers more facilities to the uninitiated and individual members are glad to be approached any day, as a rule, on their favorite hobby.

Eggs, butter, milk, chickens at the Southern Pines Curb market each Saturday morning.
