

Burrell White Plans Rural Home on Picturesque Site

Architects Busy on New Wing to House and Landscaping of Knollwood Property

Burrell White was down from New York for a few days over Sunday. He is carrying forward his development scheme at his place near the water works. A large addition to his house is a unique project. While it is connected to the main building, except for the connection it is a separate house in itself, of several large rooms, with the smaller essentials, of bath, kitchen, living room, sleeping rooms, sun parlor, etc., complete in itself, and as Mr. White says, it is a guest house. When his friends are with him they may live apart to such extent as they like, or they may come from the connecting passages to the main house, as he may go into the house of the visitors at his pleasure. But the scheme gives the feature of separate living to the extent that is desired.

The wing is part of a well-planned project, with Holleyman of Greensboro and Yeomans of Southern Pines working out the detail and seeing to the execution. The landscape features practically include the whole plantation, and will create one of the most interesting rural homes in the Sandhills. A two-purpose golf course of nine holes flanks the enlarged building, but along with a golf course Mr. White says he had in mind a fire break which is contributed by the greens and fairways, and while the observer may not have suspected that purpose it nevertheless creates an opening that will interrupt any fires that might approach from the side of the property on which the course is situated.

In front of the buildings is a field that is growing up to Bermuda grass, and there Mr. White has a dream of

Dog Halts Burglary

Attempt to Enter Pender Store in Aberdeen Frustrated, but Canine is Wounded

Police Officer Dees of Aberdeen arrived just in time at the rear entrance of Pender's Store in Aberdeen last Sunday night to prevent a burglary, but his faithful police dog would have liked it better if he'd arrived later, burglary or no burglary.

Unfortunately for the canine, he spied the intruders first and made a dash for them. A pistol shot rang out, and the dog dropped. The thieves had but one more hole to bore to make their way into the grocery when Dees and Dog arrived. They made a quick getaway, but not until they had maimed the policeman's quadruped assistant.

sheep. He came from up in the country where sheep are a part of the rural landscape, and he wants to see some sheep on his fields, and is preparing for them. A tall water tower with a windmill at the top, and big barns down the hill below the windmill add to the country features. With these will be an orchard—not a commercial orchard, but the type of orchard that gives the farm note to the country place. As the plans unfold they present one of the prettiest rural pictures of this section.

$52,000 For Berries

Some 24,000 Crates Sold on Vass Auction Market at Over $2.00 Average

A final check-up of sales on the Vass dewberry auction market this year shows that the total number of crates sold was approximately 24,000. The number last year was around 10,000. These figures do not include any berries shipped on consignment. The average price was a little more than two dollars per crate and according to Mr. Tate, manager of the market, around $52,000 was paid to the growers.

Berries were brought in from all over this section and some from Fayetteville, Laurel Hill and Raeford. They were shipped to many of the northern markets both in express cars and by truck and some were sent as far west as Chicago and Detroit. The freight rates to these distant cities are so high as to be almost prohibitive, though.

Crate sales by the Chadborn company, which totaled some six or seven thousand last year, mounted to 22,000 this year.

Mr. Tate was greatly pleased with the growth of the market this year, and hopes for an even more successful season next year. He is of the opinion that crates will be lower in price by another year.

JOHN GETS 8 MONTHS TO GET OVER HIS ANGER

John Oates was angry. There was no mistake about it. He was angry with a colored woman in Southern Pines who resided in the same house he occupied. He came home angry and as the household cat passed by him, he shot and killed it. He went off and got some liquor, took a drink or two, and went home, still angry. He threatened to kill the woman, got his rifle and rammed the barrel against the roof of her mouth. She managed to get the gun dislodged, whereupon Oates hit her on the hip, breaking the stock of his rifle. She ran and he followed and threw her down in a neighbor's potato patch and choked and beat her until they raised such a dust that the owner of the "patch" came out to see what was happening.

That is the story that came out in Recorder's Court on Monday and Oates, whose "dander" was up to such a pitch, was given eight months in which to cool down.

WEST END ON TOP OF SANDHILL LEAGUE

(Continued from page 1) game for the winners, being touched for only four hits and one earned run. But tight pitching and fielding by the Vass outfit when there were men on the bases made the eight hits West End made count for nothing.

It was a scoreless battle until the seventh when a pair of errors gave Vass two runs. They counted their only earned marker in the eighth.
