Farmers in Good Shape As Result of the Crop Reduction Program

Improving Homes and Farms With Tobacco and Cotton Money, Says Garrison

The tobacco and cotton programs are working out satisfactorily, E. H. Garrison, Jr., county agricultural agent, told members of the Kiwanis Club at their Wednesday meeting in the Pinehurst Community Church. It was the first meeting in some time Mr. Garrison had been able to attend, and he explained to the members that he was but just beginning to see above water after the strenuous work of launching and carrying through these federal crop reduction programs.

That county agents in North Carolina have done a good job in carrying out the government plans for farm aid has been proved by word from Washington that records and reports from this state have been the best and most complete received from any state, Mr. Garrison told the Kiwanians. As for the success of the program in this section, he stated that the farmers were in much better condition than they had been in some time, and were again "in the market" for such things as new wagons, farm implements and tools—could not afford—and are also spending money on house and farm building improvements, all to the benefit of the community as a whole.

The Rev. A. J. McKelway, pastor of the Pinehurst Community Church, a new member of the club, also spoke briefly and amusingly at Wednesday's meeting. The club took up the matter of planting grass seed along the double road between Southern Pines and Pinehurst. It was announced that the State Highway Department had offered to furnish the labor for the planting, the Town of Southern Pines the seed, and that all that was lacking is the fertilizer. The club is endeavoring to arrange for this.

A Baseball Saga

Southern Pines' Disastrous Season is Inspiration for Poem by S. B. Richardson

The baseball season's over, The suits are on the rack; The bats are in the locker And the balls are in the sack.

The grand stand still needs painting, Chick Sales is needing shade Despite the faithful promises The City Fathers made.

Results were disappointing To those who wished we'd won But that melody of errors Produced a lot of fun.

We started off the season With Myrick on the mound, McMillan was the backstop And caught without a sound.

Old Vance could surely catch that pill And hit it with a smack But when he started down the line Those ancient knees did crack.

Young Wilson with his stork-like limbs Was stationed out at first, While Wimpy held down second And did his very worst.

Ben Webster prancing round at short Sure stopped 'em on the jump, But when he found that Chatham bride Poor Web went in a slump.

Poor old third base, that coveted goal Which Monte tried to loot Was occupied by Weatherspoon, Who stopped them with his boot.

Tom Millar was the triple threat, Around the field he'd caper; Occasionally fill the pitcher's box And typewrite for the paper.

The outfield was a paradise For every one that came. The only qualifications were To give the man your name.

Picquet was Mountain Landis And Johnson John McGraw Charlie made all announcements While Johnny read the law.

Claude Hayes and Charlie Sadler, Those Siamese Pine Rooters Expressed their views on every play And challenged all disputers.

No matter if a play was made In the finest sort of manner Claude always said 'twas different When he lived in Indiana.

Bob Denny handled ball games Like a full fledged Russian Czar, But when the rain began to fall He umpired from his car.

DuPont, he reigned supremely 'Till a question he was asked, And when the boys took issue

He threw aside his mask. Bev. Walters umped behind the bat Too hot to even think, But it never had occurred to him That water was to drink.

Some wise sage has predicted That we lost all we had gained When we swapped the Chatham Rabbits For P. T. Barnum's brains.

We thank the boys and management For all that they have done And hope they'll all appreciate This jingle's only fun.

A MODEST SNAKE

Howard Butler the other day went to the bookcase at his home up at the mines to get a book. As he pulled the volume from the shelf he noticed something falling down behind the books and curiosity prompted him to take out more books to see what had been misplaced there. It was a snake skin indicating a snake about five feet long and an inch and a half in diameter. Howard says it was a modest snake that went behind the books to take off its summer clothes and prepare for winter. How it got into and out of the house he has no idea.
