O. Schaub, of State College, announces.

Rental and benefit payments, largely to cotton and tobacco farmers, amounted to $12,524,741.51, while the balance, $979,223.70, went as payment to local and county committees for their work in administering the program. Rental and benefit payments went as follows: $6,521,997.22 for cotton; $60,560.92 for wheat; $5,640,688.95 for tobacco, and $301,494.42 for corn-hogs, Dean Schaub states.

Moore county received in rental and benefit payments in the four classifications, or those in which it participated, up to November 30, last, a total of $43,601.83.

OTEN BOYS REMEMBERED BY AUXILIARY AT CHRISTMAS

At the regular meeting of Sandhills Unit No. 134, American Legion Auxiliary, held on Monday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Fields in Pinehurst, report was given by the committee in charge of the Christmas work of the organization. The unit takes care of four boys in the Veterans Hospital at Oteen and each of these veterans was remembered at Christmas with a wool sweater as well as with a cash gift. The 127 children at the CCC camp at Jackson Springs were made happy with toys, candy, fruit and nuts and Mrs. Buckingham, president of the unit, attended the Christmas party there. The families of several veterans were also remembered with substantial gifts.

Mrs. Fields, chairman of the recent supper held in Pinehurst under the auspices of the auxiliary, reported it was a financial success and made possible the splendid Christmas work.

A rummage sale is to be held on Saturday, January 26th, opposite the Southern Pines postoffice. Donations of clothing, shoes, etc., will be greatly appreciated, and may be taken to the home of Mrs. Max Backer.

At the beginning of the auxiliary year Mrs. Buckingham, the president, offered a prize to the members getting the most new members. At the meeting Monday, Mrs. Fields was the fortunate recipient of a beautiful luncheon set for bringing in seven new members.

The next meeting will be held the second Monday afternoon in February in Southern Pines, the place to be announced later.

Underprivileged Girls Are Fitted For Life at Samarcaand Manor

Rev. D. H. Ives Dispels Widespread Opinion That Institution is a Penal One

By D. H. Ives

Consisting of modern and commodious buildings, with ample acreage pleasantly situated, Samarcaand Manor has nothing about it to suggest a penal institution, nor is it such, though widespread opinion seems to have so classified it.

What then is Samarcaand? Primarily it is a place where underprivileged girls and those with unfortunate home situations who have come under court jurisdiction may receive under well-trained leadership such instruction as may fit them to take their rightful places in our social order; and while the material equipment is, perhaps, not all that might be desired, it is well adapted to the present need.

In addition to the various dormitories, there is the general administration building, a modern school building, chapel, hospital, and superintendent's home. Playgrounds and a little lake provide year-round recreational facilities. The large tract of land on which the school is located makes possible the production of many necessities which otherwise would have to be purchased at considerable expense. Farm and dairy methods, household and industrial arts, as well as the regular school activities, are provided as helpful adjuncts to a carefully planned program of social development.

Making Useful Citizens

The major interests in this institution center around the individual. To quote Miss Grace Robson, the present superintendent, "Special effort is made to prepare the child for the more difficult adjustment to life on her return home. She is taught to become a useful citizen and not just to be a good child in daily institutional routine." To attain this end the cooperation and interest of all the workers is sought in an effort to bring to these children at least a substitute for the security which they lacked in their home situations, and to assist them in the development of self-control and self-determination. In fact, all training and treatment in this institution organizes its efforts toward the preparation of these children for successfully meeting life's duties and responsibilities.

The achievement of this is sought through what we may call a program of re-education. New ideals and new attitudes are substituted for the child's old ideas and former training. The actual method is by "Classification Procedure," the major principle of which is the immediate preparation of the child for return to normal family life and later self-maintenance in any community. This procedure is based on good social case work practice, and consists in general of three phases: First, diagnosis, in which the child is under observation, and the opinions of all contacting workers are correlated in setting up goals for attainment. The second phase, or treatment, seeks to help the child attain the goals set and to prepare the community for the child's return. The last is parole, which consists of a pre-parole review to determine eligibility; a check on social attitudes, education and general progress, and then giving assistance in the readjustments necessary during the parole period. Unfortunately, this brief summary can hardly give the reader an adequate view of the comprehensive program of social development which is undertaken.

Spiritual Welfare

While caring for the physical and intellectual needs, the spiritual welfare of the Samarcaand girls is not neglected. Sunday-school is conducted regularly, and ministers of several denominations conduct worship services in rotation. For a number of years Baptists have provided the Bible school literature, though other religious groups have also contributed various periodicals. A more attentive and interested congregation could hardly be found than these girls during the worship hours. For more than a year there have been several professions of faith in Christ each month, all having come on their own initiative. It has been the writer's privilege to baptize over forty of these girls and there are now, at this writing, forty more awaiting the ordinance.

The question is frequently asked, "Are not these girls infected with social diseases?" In answer we are frank to say that some of them are, but it is reasonably certain that the percentage of those so afflicted is hardly more than would be found in a cross-section of the same social stratum anywhere in our State. Furthermore, at Samarcaand all are under expert medical care and the most advanced remedial practice is utilized for the amelioration of their condition. For this reason, they are far less a social menace than many individuals in local communities. It would be hard to find a happier looking, healthier group of children anywhere than you may see at Samarcaand, and with the training there received, most of them will make useful citizens wherever they go. It is ours to see that no reproach is brought upon these who, often through no fault of theirs, have had institutional care.

We would not conclude without special tribute to the late Dr. Delia Dixon-Carroll, whose pioneering efforts and unremitting labor made Samarcaand Manor a reality; to the past and present directors for their progressive attitude, and to Miss Grace M. Robson, its present superintendent, for her interest in the individual welfare and development of all under her charge.

Whatever your opinion of Samarcaand may be at present, you cannot visit the school and see what is being done there without giving thanks for the institution and its splendid work in behalf of the unfortunate and underprivileged.

TO GIVE ILLUSTRATED TALK ON THE SOUTHERN MOUNTAINEER

At the Community Hour at the Church of Wide Fellowship on Sunday at 7:30 p. m., Dr. Raymond will give an address on "The Southern Mountaineer," illustrated with stereopticon pictures. Among the five million inhabitants of the mountains of the South there are many interesting survivals from the Colonial days of American life. The British ballads and the homespun industries still found in the remoter regions and more isolated districts of the mountains will be described. From his experience of more than ten years as a teacher at Berea College, Dr. Raymond believes that the mountaineers, sometimes stigmatized as "hill billies" and ignorant, are one of the most valuable elements in our national life. He will speak of the hopeful aspects of this great highland people. Every one is invited.

Would Restore Fees For Capture of Stills

Representative Clegg Introduces Bill in House to Give Bonus to Sheriff's Office

Representative W. R. Clegg, of Moore county has introduced a bill in the House of Representatives, which was passed by the House and sent to the Senate, where it was referred to the committee on Salaries and Fees, which would amend Chapter 246, Public Laws of 1933, eliminating Moore county from the provisions of that act.

Chapter 246, Public Laws of 1933, amended Sections 3401 and 3411 (x), Volume 11 of the Consolidated Statutes, so as to exclude Moore and Lenoir counties from the provisions of those statutes, which had changed the fees allowed for sheriff's seizure of stills. Moore county had been exempt from the provisions of the Consolidated Statutes and the new bill now in the Senate would place Moore county under the two sections of the Consolidated Statutes, and restore the fees which formerly went to the Sheriff's office for seizure of stills.
