To Launch Drive To Modernize Farm Homes

Campaign Gets Under Way with Cooperation of State and County Groups

A campaign to acquaint 6,250,000 farmers of the United States with the provisions of the National Housing Act, which make possible the modernization of their homes and equipment, is being launched by the Federal Housing Administration, in cooperation with State and county farm organizations. The present plan is to bring the campaign to a climax before the farmers become too busy with their Spring plowing.

A small group of field men of the Farm Section of the Housing Administration will work under the Regional Directors, and in cooperation with the State Associate Directors in charge of modernization, in their efforts to bring to the direct attention of all the farmers in the country the benefits which are available to them under the modernization program.

Present plans include the organization of campaigns in most of the 3,072 counties of the United States, with special meetings in which the local civic bodies will be asked to take part.

Wherever the Better Housing Committees are organized on a county wide basis, these committees will be asked to enlarge their activities in order to include farm modernization.

Where there are no county-wide committees, the Housing Administration's representatives will seek the active cooperation of all agencies in the county interested directly in farm improvement.
