Prof. Smith of Boston University Brings Rare Collection to Church of Wide Fellowship

Prof. H. Augustine Smith of Boston University, world traveler and lecturer on art, music and drama, will set up his Temple of Religious Art at the Church of Wide Fellowship on Sunday night, March 17. The gallery is made up of rare color reproductions, many in oils, of the masterpieces of Fra Angelico, Michelangelo, Raphael, Correggio, Titian, Da Vinci, and nineteenth century artists such as Burne Jones, Millais, L'Hermitte, von Uhde, Whistler, Oakley, Sargent, etc.

Prof. Smith has led American tour parties through the European galleries such as the National and Tate, London, the Louvre, Paris, the Pitti and Uffizi, Florence, the Vatican, Rome, and galleries in Munich, Dresden and Berlin. He will unlock the hidden meanings of pictures by means of a magic key—even the most unnoticed will be fascinated in the untold story of the pictures. In the discovery of a new continent (that of symbolism in painting). If there is time, Prof. Smith will pose one or two of the pictures, using adults and children out of his audience, for his Living Pictures.

This famous Boston Temple of Art has been exhibited in the finest halls and art galleries in the country, such as the Cleveland and Toledo art museums, the Dayton art gallery, the Chicago La Salle Hotel Salon, the Cincinnati Music Hall. New pictures are being added all the time and new devices used to interest the most hard-boiled. This gallery will prove the wisdom of the old Chinese proverb—"One picture is worth more than ten thousand words."

This finest traveling gallery of art in the United States will be here only one day. The public is cordially invited.

It is reported that the church has continued its useful work and in many ways has made greater strides during the past year than in any previous year. a waist-high walkway which led from the kitchen to the "big house" and his investigation resulted in a confession of guilt by the slain man's son and the finding of the gun, which had been so recently fired, beneath a mattress in the home. John Sneed is now serving a 22-year sentence for the crime.

Kelly's cool-headedness was perhaps all that saved him a couple of years ago when he went to the Union Church community to investigate a row among some colored folks. He met Charlie Love, an Indian, face to face, and as the man neared the officer, he reached down and pulled a pistol from the vicinity of his sock and drew it on Kelly before he realized that there was anything wrong. The officer tried in every way that

Driver's License Law

Heavy Penalties Attached to Violation Under New North Carolina Statute

A driver's license law has been enacted by the North Carolina legislature. Here are some of its provisions:

Nobody under 16 years of age shall be licensed; professional chauffeurs must be 18 years old; and drivers of public passenger vehicles must be 21 years old.

Licenses will be issued without payment of a fee and without examination if application is made before November 1, 1935. Thereafter the fee will be $1 for drivers other than chauffeurs and $2 for chauffeurs, and applicants must give evidence, by examination or otherwise, of their ability to drive.

Licenses found to have been obtained by false statements may be canceled. A license may be suspended when the holder is shown to be careless or reckless.

A license must be revoked when the holder is convicted of manslaughter, driving while drunk, or of any other serious offense.

The sentence for violation of the license law may be as great as six months' imprisonment of a fine of $500.

for the past year in a very interesting way. In addition to supper and business meeting, some local entertainment will be injected into the meeting.

The Rev. C. Rexford Raymond, D. D., pastor of the Church of Wide Fellowship in Southern Pines, will deliver the address of the evening, his subject being "The Southern Mountains."

Immediately after the annual meeting, the directors will meet and elect officers for the coming year. The officers for the present year are W. R. Johnson, president; T. R. Cole, vice president; A. P. Thompson, treasurer, and I. C. Sledge, secretary.

he could think of to divert the Indian's attention for a second in order that he might get his gun from its holster, but to no avail. "I've been intending to kill you for seven years," he was told. Finally Mr. Kelly, with no show of fear, warned the Indian that he had better get himself straightened out. "I don't want to have to come back out here after you," he said, as he turned and walked calmly toward his car, still covered with the gun. He drove back to Carthage, got a warrant, and in an hour's time had the Indian under arrest.

Fingerprint Expert

Feeling that a knowledge of fingerprinting would be of untold value to him in his work as deputy sheriff, Kelly took a course in this by correspondence about three years ago and later did special study in High Point under J. H. McMahon of Jacksonville, Florida, Superintendent of the Bureau of Identification. He made excellent grades and successfully passed the tests necessary for becoming a fingerprint expert. His interest in this and in detective work has led to his decision to make it his life work.

plete plans for operating the hotel, they are already making such minor repairs to the buildings as were necessitated by its having been closed for four years and have arranged to have the golf course restored to perfect condition during the coming summer.

The property comprises besides the Inn itself with its contents, a separate servants' house and a caddy house, 500 acres of land including 250 building lots, and an 18-hole Donald Ross golf course.

The Pine Needles Inn, only fireproof hostelry in this section, is a five-story brick-and-steel building with 80 guest rooms, kitchen and usual public spaces fully and tastefully furnished and thoroughly equipped. It was built in 1927 from plans prepared by the late Lyman H. Sise, of Boston, and cost with land, shrubbery and other improvements, $750,000. The portion completed was designed as the first unit of a larger structure with wings projecting at angles toward the front from either end. It was successfully operated with Arthur Richardson as manager until the end of the season of 1930-31, since which time it has remained closed.

Timber Preservation Subject of Meeting

Extension Forester To Spend Next Friday Overseeing Work in County

By E. H. GARRISON, County Agent

R. W. Graeber, Extension Forester, will spend March 15th in this county going over some of the work being done at this time. The principal meeting at 9:30 will be held at the project now being carried on by Colin G. Spencer on the Tinner's Shop road. The work which Mr. Spencer is doing is some of the most interesting in the county and should be a good example for many others to follow.

There should be and always will be plenty of timber in this county if those who have this land now would follow a different system of cutting this. The common practice has been to cut anything as it came. Where the system as outlined by the Forest Service is followed, there will be a crop of timber coming on all the time and there will be no barrow and eroded hills left to wash away. I hope that everyone who has timber will attend this meeting.

On this project of Mr. Spencer's, trees have been planted which have made rapid growth since they were planted, and you will have an opportunity to see others which have just been planted and the methods followed in this work. Please make a special effort to be there and bring a car full with you when you come. I am sure that you will find this a morning very profitably spent and that you will also find this a very interesting meeting.

RATHER BE FOX HUNTER THAN WRITER, SAYS BOYD

"not one of 'em will chase a rabbit"—than of "Roll, River."

One gathered that the title was giving him a little trouble. He did not want a title with a comma in it, he explained, and yet he wanted to bring the rolling river into the title because it was the situs and the symbol of his story. The new novel concerns three generations of small gentry in a Mid-western river town, each generation thinking it is making a great deal of progress and is smarter than the others because it avoids the others' mistakes, but each blithely going ahead making mistakes just as disastrous on its own. The action takes place between 1885 and the present. The first part of the novel has been serialized in "Scribners" as "The Dark Shore."

Novel of the Old South Mr. Boyd was diverted from speaking of his present novel to the one he hopes to do some day—a realistic novel of the Old South.

"Somebody ought to write such a novel and tell the truth about the South in those days," he said. "You get the idea from the romantic novels that everybody was rich, charming and cultured there before the war, and that living was gracious. As a matter of fact, even in the best homes the people did not live very well. They had lots of slaves to work for them, but for the most part the arrangement wasn't satisfactory."

"You ought to read some of the old diaries in my family about how Southern women envied Northern women their paid help. The point was that in the South people could not fire their slaves who wouldn't work; the only thing they could do was sell them down the river and take on other field hands and try to train them up."

"It all boils down to this, I suppose: The Negro has always been the real master in the South. The Civil War was fought to keep him a slave not so much from the economic standpoint as from the fear of what would happen if 2,000,000 or 3,000,000 were turned loose on the white population. Emancipation turned out to be a good thing rather than a bad thing, but Southerners couldn't be expected to see it at that time, terrified as they were at what had happened in Haiti and in Martinique."

FIRE DESTROYS HOUSE

The fire alarm brought out the Southern Pines apparatus in record time shortly after 10 o'clock last Friday morning, but the run to West Southern Pines was ineffectual, a delayed alarm giving the fire time to raze the three-room dwelling of Sarah Allen at Gaines street and Wisconsin avenue. As the owner was away nothing was saved.

the surrounding pine-strewn terrain, the Pine Needles Inn offers attractions unsurpassed by any hostelry in the middle south, and it is fervently hoped by all interested in the welfare of the Sandhills that by next season it will again be open for the accommodation of guests and once more a vital factor in the resort activities.

FIVE TIME WORLD BILLIARD CHAMPION HERE MONDAY

Erwin Rudolph is to appear at Straka's billiard parlor on East Broad street, Southern Pines on Monday, March 11 and men and women interested in billiards should not fail to take advantage of his visit. Rudolph will give an exhibition at pocket billiards as well as a series of fancy shots.

Rudolph held the world's title in 1927, 1930, and 1931 as well as in 1933 and 1934, losing the latter to Andrew Ponzi in a challenge match. He was born in Cleveland, Ohio in 1893, and is of Bohemian descent. He has been playing billiards for 23 years. During his career as a violinist in a theatre in Cleveland Rudolph decided to become seriously interested in the billiard game and gave up his musical profession to enter one of the world's tournaments.

It was no easy road for Rudolph at first but it was a question of "making 'em or starving." After a short time he succeeded in "making 'em" and as a result is today recognized as one of the few top-notchers in the game.
