Lean Ladies of West End Defeat "Fats" in Charity Basketball Game

Contest Winds Up With Players Sitting in Floor and Spectators in Hysterics

The Parent-Teachers Association found itself in need of funds, so the "Fat Ladies" and the "Lean Ladies" agreed to put on a basketball game and donate the proceeds to the cause. Friday night, March 15, was set as the date. Mr. Sinclair was to be referee.

For two days the topic of conversation was: "Goin' to see the Fats and the Leans play" and the answer: "Am I you can just bet I am. I want a good laugh!"

The time for the great game arrived and the combatants came in shorts, gym suits, long pants rolled to a precise level between knee and ankle, plus-fours, long silk stockings over the knees, ankle socks, no socks at all. It was very apparent that each player had used her own idea as to the proper costume for preserving her erstwhile dignity as much as possible.

Mr. Sinclair called the teams to the center of the floor and gave them their instructions as to goals and out of bound rules. The whistle blew, the ball was tossed in, and the fray began. There were odd and unlooked for events: Mrs. M. C. McDonald ducking every time the ball was passed to her; Mrs. Miriam Eifort tucking the ball under one arm and walking up to the center lines to hand it to one of the "Fat" forwards; Mrs. Ertle Pulliam trying to guard Mrs. Pearl Tucker and cracking her in the face so hard it could be heard all over the gym.

The first quarter seemed to start off rather evenly. The forwards and the guards for both sides kicked the ball and crawled after it, grabbed the ball and walked all over the court with it. Mr. Sinclair's whistle had very little effect. He needed a bugle and a pair of stilts.

Richardson and Uphold lived up to the day when they were stars on the West End High School teams and went on a scoring rampage for the "Leans." Uphold was the star with 13 points, her sister, Mrs. Richardson, trailing her with 6 points. Mrs. Graham, with a wicked scoop shot, made the two baskets for the "Fats."

The audience laughed so much that tears were streaming down the cheeks of husbands, children, fathers and mothers. The scorers were laughing so hard they almost forgot to keep score; the referee almost choked on his whistle.

The game ended with more of the members of the teams sitting on the floor than standing up. The final score was 19-4 for the "Lean Ladies," alias "Spararibs."
