

Farmers Can Save Thousands by Control of Tobacco Worms

Timely Information on How to Combat Pests Which Cause Heavy Damage Each Year

Tobacco worms are well known pests to North Carolina tobacco growers. There are two kinds of worms responsible for the damage as most growers well know: (1) The Tobacco Bud Worm, (2) The Tobacco Horn Worm. The pests cause many thousands of dollars damage to the tobacco crop each year and growers should make every effort to control these insects.

The Tobacco Bud Worm is closely related to the corn ear worm and feeds in the tips of the growing plants. The best known method of control is to apply poisoned corn meal to the buds. Mix 1 pound of arsenate of lead with 75 pounds of corn meal (or 6 heaping teaspoonfuls of arsenate of lead to 1 peck of corn meal.)

Carefully mix the poison throughout the corn meal. The meal should not contain much coarse husk. About 12 pounds of the mixture (arsenate of lead and corn meal) or 1 peck per acre is necessary for each application. Do not substitute Paris green, calcium arsenate, or any other poison for the arsenate of lead. Do not substitute any other material for the corn meal.

A small pinch of the poison mixture should be dropped into the center of the bud. Applications carelessly made are of no value. When the buds are closed they should be opened with one hand and the mixture dropped in with the other. Do not apply too much of the poison mixture as an overdose will injure the plants.

From three to five applications during a season will usually give control. Applications should be begun when a careful examination of the buds show that the worms are becoming numerous. The applications should be made a week apart.

The Tobacco Horn Worm is well known by all tobacco growers. The damage by this pest is often very severe. Arsenate of lead applied as a dust has given best results in the control of the horn worm. A dust the arsenate of lead should be applied at the rate of 3 1/2 lbs. to 5 lbs. per acre. If applied as a spray, use from 3 to 4 lbs. of arsenate of lead to 100 gallons of water.

The "one-in-six mixture" (1 pound of Paris green with 5 pounds of arsenate of lead) used for the flea beetle will control the horn worm. See circular on Tobacco Flea Beetle for information about the tobacco flea beetle. Use only poisons which are advised. Do not substitute any other material for those recommended.
