

AUTO OIL TRUCK CRASH NEAR CALVARY CHURCH

A "traffic jam" near Calvary church on Route 27 resulted in a minor accident on Monday when the oil truck of C. F. Barnes of Carthage bumped into the rear of an automobile in which a Mr. and Mrs. Bartholomew and sister of Louisville were riding. A tobacco truck was stopped on the edge of the highway on a grade and the oil truck came over a hill and struck the automobile which was proceeding very slowly as it approached the parked truck.

The sister of Mr. Bartholomew suffered an injury to her head and after being attended by a Carthage doctor was carried to the hospital in Sanford for an x-ray. It was thought that the party would be able to continue the journey on Tuesday.

Theatre

If a picture starring a platinum blonde could make the United States a nation of platinum blonde women, why shouldn't a picture of all redheads put red hair back on the map?

This somewhat reasonable question is answered in the affirmative by "Redheads On Parade," calculated to make the world red hair conscious, which is the attractive at the Southern Pines Theatre, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, August 26, 27, 28, with a Tuesday matinee.

"Redheads On Parade" features one of our old favorites Dixie Lee, now Mrs. Bing Crosby, and John Boles, both of whom have singing and dancing numbers.

Basically, with romantic, dramatic, comic and relative contrasting qualities included, the story is a picture of picture making. As such, in portraying the difficulties sometimes encountered in such an activity and the wiles and stratagems created to overcome them, it is quite a ribbing satire of some of the methods in which producers sometimes may indulge. In doing so, it gives many behind the scenes glimpses of the mechanics of picture making. The story, primarily romantic, moves to the tune of laugh-provoking comedy, music, dancing and fast action. Its lavish backgrounds are typical of a modern Hollywood motion picture studio and an ultra modern beauty shop, with many spectacular sequences, featuring a host of beautiful girls, which materially add to its gay atmosphere. An added attraction is Pop Eye The Sailor in "Dizzy Divers."

Gable is seen as a swashbuckling prospector who meets a young San Francisco society beauty, played by Loretta Young, on the trail. Thrown together, their codes conflict. However, with life stripped of all the artifices of civilization, their differences vanish and they fall in love. Jack Oakie supplies the comedy relief as Gable's wise-cracking buddy, while also prominently cast are Frank Conroy, Reginald Owen, Katherine DeMille, Sidney Toler and "Buck," the new dog star.

The entire picture was filmed in the snow country of remote northern Washington. The location on towering Mount Baker, where the company of 150 actors actually faced danger and starvation when they were marooned by the worst blizzard to hit the Northwest in six years, is scenically magnificent and bears a striking resemblance to the gold rush locale.

INTERESTING NEWS FROM OLD SOUTHERN PINES PAPERS

The Free Press was an early newspaper. The Pine Knot antedated the Press. Jay Tefft of Port Jefferson, L. I., was the local editor who opened the road and produced the town's pioneer publication. Printing the local newspaper half a century ago evidently was not an absorbing task that kept the editor wholly occupied, for as a side line he was ticket agent, the first ticket agent for Southern Pines in 1886, if the record is correct. He no doubt needed something else to fill in his time, so found a job around the station, or perhaps, it was the other way 'round.

Given time, the paper evolved through the years, the railroad grew, the expansion of each making satisfactory headway. The mixed freights and passenger trains that were running about 1894 were serving a combination traffic, both in human and other freight. Six years later the president and directors of the Seaboard Air Line issued invitations for the ceremonies attending the opening of the lines between Richmond and Tampa. "The first through train over the new Seaboard Air Line passed through here Wednesday afternoon in two sections. The trains were very handsome consisting of six cars. On board were officers of the Seaboard with their guests and a number of prominent newspaper men."

That was June 2, 1900. Things were picking up. "Work commenced this morning on city water works test well. R. W. Brown in charge." Mr. Alex Cameron moved from Manley up to Southern Pines and becomes a member of the firm of Cameron and McQueen. The livery stable stimulates progress, and invites neighborliness. "Misses Bonnie Muse, Annie Worthy, Margaret Harris, Beulah Harrington, Mess. Jesse Larkin, L. R. Ritter, and Mr. McIntosh of Carthage paid Dr. Judd a pleasant call today. They drove from Carthage to Southern Pines, thence to Pinehurst." Dr. Judd was the dentist. If you were coming for professional service the grinding wheels over the long sandy journey would seem interminable now.

Southern Pines maidens were not without advantage. J. Herbert Ferris advertised his lessons of Pyroglyphy and burnt wood. Miss Breneman of the Potter school offered physical culture, diction and elocution, dancing and music. A performance with admission and you saw Irene Couch recite "Old Soapy," "The Bridal Wine Cup," by Evelyn Vroom, "In the Kegs," Lula Blue, Marie St. John, Grace Sadelson and others were names prominent then. The titles from their recitations suggested gin and suds. But that was before we worried much about prohibition.

"The first Washington Regiment of Volunteers reached San Francisco from Manila on the Transport Pennsylvania last Monday. In the regiment is Henry Junge, a son of our townsman, W. F. Junge. He will reach Southern Pines about Thanksgiving.

"Mr. Junge wears the prettiest roses. He has over sixty varieties in his garden, blooming profusely now." That was in the fall of 1899. Kindly old neighbor lived many years to share his flowers and cordiality.

The local items for the Fall of thirty-six years ago had many familiar names. The Grouts have returned from Washington. Mr. Ruggles is having his house painted. "Our friend H. A. Page, besides being president of the Aberdeen and Asheboro railroad is now mayor of Aberdeen. He says he will enforce the law giving his town good government." Mary Richardson arrived from Maine, recently graduated from Bellevue hospital, New York City. The paper says she is a bright young woman who ranked second in her class of twenty-five. Miss Mary has since been promoted. Most of our admirers would say she wasn't second to anything, around town. The Baptist church had preaching at eleven a. m. A baptizing in the little lake at Dr. Sadelson's at 9:30. All were invited.

Prices of food and clothing were low. Willis Young sold milk for seven cents a quart. Huffine disposed of his wares for a modest sum. His calicoes were sold for four and six cents a yard. Patch and Williams were operating a dry goods and grocery store. The Piney Woods Inn was the leading hotel. An accurate philosopher wrote: "Every pleasant day a number of golfers are seen on the links adjoining the Piney Woods Inn. The indications are that golf will grow in favor."

The Tourist supplants the Free Press in 1904.

"Royal welcome to the Governor. Southern Pines crowds the Piney Woods Inn to honor the chief magistrate. He wins the Yankee. Governor Aycock in his happiest frame of mind captured his exotic constituency long before he arose to speak." That everybody was all dressed up was easily seen. "The brilliant lights, the floral decorations and the handsome toilets of the women gave an air of luxury and gayety not often seen so far away from large centers of population. The ladies vied with each other in the matter of elegant dressing. Specially noticeable were several bouquets of native orchids in full bloom, some of the blossoms being six inches in length." Who was the forerunner of our Judge Way? Anyway Governor Aycock with Mrs. A. M. Clarke on his arm led the way, while Divine blessing was invoked by the venerable P. H. Laufman." It was an enthusiastic assemblage. Aycock said he came to capture the Yankees and found they had captured him. W. A. Blue, O. H. Folley, M. H. Folley, C. N. Blue and J. J. Heckart were among the Aberdeen guests at the banquet.

"Washington's birthday was celebrated by 39 young ladies giving an entertainment in Clarke's opera house Tuesday evening. It consisted of a musical melange, with the additional feature of character sketches indicative of Colonial days in Massachusetts. J. H. Tilghman, Walter Blue, I. L. Hamlin, J. Schwartz and I. C. Edgerton were Continental Guards. R. E. Geyer was George Washington, Vedah Southerland playing the part of Mary. Miles Standish, Dr. L. H. High, Pocohontas, Kate Holcomb, John Alden, Roscoe Durham." There was a long list of Washington's other friends.

James Boyd of Harrisburg buys the Widow Blue timber through Junge and Beck. The tract of land had something over 500 acres and extended from the ridge east of the village across the low highlands to head of James Creek. About the same time John D. Rockefeller was interested enough in the Shaw ridge to look it over and inquire into the value of land. The oil man was here to visit an old school friend, the wife of Judge Lacey, whose acquaintance began when students in 1856 at Oswego Academy. The Boyds made their acquisition in 1904. Carried on in the hands of the grandsons they have become valuable neighbors and important in the development of the entire community.

Many hands were active in shaping the little town's early growth. Some of the older ones are yet. While many are memories.
