Over a Million

North Carolina Fans Pay Big Money to See 1935 Football Games

North Carolina collegiate football in its 1935 season just closed grew into the million dollar bracket for the first time in history, according to figures compiled by the Associated Press.

The heated campaign brought the greatest single game attendance in Southern gridiron history, 46,880, when Duke and North Carolina met November 16 at Duke's stadium at Durham.

The so-called "Big Five" circuit, embracing North Carolina, Duke, N. C. State, Wake Forest and Davidson, played before a composite crowd of 363,380 spectators, which, at an average of $2 a seat, paid approximately $725,000.

The figures do not include the six members of the North State conference of Appalachian, Catawba, Elon, Guilford, Lenoir Rhyne and Western Carolina Teachers which averaged an estimated season attendance of approximately 20,000 spectators at home and abroad each, or a grand total for that league of about 120,000.

Neither does the grand total include the more than half dozen junior colleges which performed before an estimated 50,000 or more fans.

A breakdown of figures showed that North Carolina's tar heels, who lost but one game in a nine-contest schedule, led State elevens in playing before 149,380 witnesses. Duke's Blue Devils, who won the state championship in rolling over the Tar Heels 25-0, ranked second in playing to 139,880 fans. Other totals for "Big Five" teams were: N. C. State, 107,000; Wake Forest, 53,500, and Davidson, 52,000.

North Carolina, Davidson and Wake Forest played nine games each, while Duke and N. C. State played 10. Attendance averages per game were: North Carolina, 16,598; Duke, 13,988; N. C. State, 10,700; Wake Forest, 5,944; and Davidson, 5,778.

Although intense rivalry among Carolina, Duke and N. C. State was responsible in most part for the unprecedented attendance, college officials credited unusually mild weather with beckoning many fans to the stadia. Not a single rainy football day was encountered until November 16 and the first extreme cold football afternoon appeared the following Saturday.

NOVEL CONCERT AT HIGH SCHOOL AUDITORIUM

min is the invention of Prof. Leon TheFemin, the famous Russian scientist, and it produces delightful music at the will of the player without any mechanical means or personal contact. Simply by the gestures of her hands Miss Young draws forth tones of vibrant mellowness resembling the tones of a cello.

There will be a demonstration of the Theremin at the close of the entertainment, and everyone is invited to come forward at which time the details of the invention will be fully explained by Miss Young. One has to hear this amazing instrument to appreciate the most unique and beautiful combination of tones. There will be a charge of 10 cents for children at the matinee and of 35 cents for the evening concert.

TO HONOR COL. OLDS

Col. Fred A. Olds, who died less than a year ago, is to have a memorial in the Hall of History which he founded and built up through the years. The N. C. Historical Commission has decided to place one in the hall. A committee has been named to make recommendations as to the type of memorial and methods of paying for it. It may be a bronze tablet, and probably will be paid for by the school children. Colonel Olds piloted through Raleigh and entertained, many of them now middle-aged men and women.

FOREST FIRES

The 55 N. C. counties organized to fight forest fires had 115 such fires in October, which burned over 1,737 acres and caused estimated damage of $3,350. This is a larger number of fires than in several months, but the area burned over is small, averaging 15 acres to the fire, as against 35 acres in August and 236 acres in July. Recreationists caused 40 and smokers 37 of them.

COTTON GINNINGS

The Census report shows that there were 1,199 bales of cotton ginned in Moore county from the crop of 1935 prior to December, as compared with 1,353 bales ginned to December 1st last year. William D. Smith, Special Agent, announces.
