The Weather

February Was Month of Surprises with Snow, Mist, Rain and Sunshine

February was a real Chinese "three coat weather" month and if the prophet Ground Hog came out into the open, which is to be doubted, he found some snow, some mist, and some rain, a fair sample of a month of surprises, varying from a low of four above zero on the 1st to a high of 77 on the 25th, three and one-half inches of snow on the 6th, four inches on the 21st, and a total of seven and one-half for the month; 5.44 inches of rain, 1.41 inches above the normal expectation, and an average temperature of 40.12 degrees, 4.2 degrees lower than the long time average for the month.

On St. Valentine's day, February 14th, 1899 came the "great freeze" extending clear to the Gulf Coast, the temperature recorded for the Sandhills being four degrees below zero, the nearest approach to this figure until this year being 10 above zero. The total rainfall for January and February was 12.09 inches, nearly four and three-quarter inches over normal.

Long time average	55.1	33.6	44.3
1935	59.5	33.7	49.1
1936	51.24	29	40.22
