

Moore County Dewberries Feature Article in The Pilot's Rotogravure

Many Interesting Stories, Fully Illustrated, in Next Week's 12-Page Magazine

Covering a wide variety of subjects, from canned food for cows to the 4-H Camp at White Lake, all attractively illustrated with scores of pictures secured in all sections of North Carolina, the June issue of The Pilot's State Farmer Section will come to all rural subscribers next week at no additional cost.

The big, 12-page, all-rotogravure magazine will have something in it for every member of the farm family.

Jo P. Dunlop, Jr., the roving North Carolina reporter has picked up a mighty interesting story in Moore county on dewberries. His facts and figures show that this succulent fruit has become a real cash crop in this section of the state.

An article, "North Carolina Farm Youth Camps at White Lake," tells how young Tar Heel farmers and 4-H Club boys and girls enjoy Summer outings at this beautiful Bladen county recreation spot. A typical day's schedule, details on the camp layout and management, all profusely illustrated, will make this feature of special interest to all 4-H Club members and their families.

P. H. Kine, agronomist at the State College will reveal some important factors in cotton growth.

"Canned Food for Cows," another timely and informative article, tells how to build and use a simple system which should prove an effective and inexpensive silage saver.

Ammunition to combat insects preying on tobacco is provided by E. G. Moss, assistant director in charge of the North Carolina experiment station.

Tips on the control of brown rot should be especially welcomed by peach growers in this section.

But these are only a few of the outstanding North Carolina features which readers of The Pilot will find in the June issue of our State Farmer Section. Lete Gettys, farm philosopher, writes in his own inimitable manner on the feature page; four attractive, new and smart Summer fashions are presented in the big, two-page women's section; and two full pages of news and human interest pictures are among other outstanding editorial features which will round out the popular agricultural supplement next week.

Watch for next week's issue, and those to follow in the first full week of each month to come, exclusively in this district in The Pilot's all-rotogravure State Farmer Section.

GALBRAITHS LEAVE AFTER 27 YEARS RESIDENCE

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Galbraith have sold their home on East Broad street and have left for their home in Charleroi, Pa., after living in Southern Pines for 27 years. During this time they have endeared themselves to many people here who will miss them greatly. They have been fine citizens and the town is always sorry to lose any of its good citizens.

During these 27 years they have made the Baptist church their home church. They were loyal attendants, never missing a service, unless they were ill. For many years Mrs. Galbraith sang in the choir and she also took an active part in the Woman's Society of the church and engaged in other church activities. The church as well as the town will regret to have them go, and hope they will return during the winter seasons.

CHURCH FISH FRY

The Young People of the Pinehurst Community Church are sponsoring a fish fry at Juniper Lake this evening, Friday, at 6:30 o'clock.
