THE SANDHILLS: A SUMMER RESORT

It looks as if it was time to start advertising the Sandhills as a summer resort.

Northern papers have been full up for weeks with stories of the heat. Record temperatures have been recorded in various parts of the country. Heat prostrations have kept hospitals full, have caused many deaths. All this in the north, while we've been comfortable and cool as a cucumber down here, sleeping under blankets at night.

We were talking to Dr. Raymond of the Church of Wide Fellowship the other day, and we asked him where he was going on his vacation.

"The place where I'd like most to spend my vacation is the one place I can't," he said. "To my mind, it's an ideal place in summer—Southern Pines."

But a clergyman can't "vacation" in his home town. He can't avoid church duties, calling on the sick, cheering up the down-hearted—doing all those things which he wants to do eleven months of the year but needs to get away from the twelfth. But we agree with the doctor. This is a pretty fine place to spend the summer when we have such weather as we've been having of late, — and northern communities have what they've been having. It may be cruel, but a fellow can't help but giggle up his sleeve a bit when he gets a letter of commiseration from up New York way saying:

"It's 102 here. I hate to think what it must be down there."

And that same night we crawl in under the patchwork quilts grandma made us, and sleep the sleep of the just.

FARES REDUCED, REVENUES INCREASED

Reports indicate that the experiment of sharply reduced passenger rates on the railroads is proving beneficial to the carriers, as well as, of course, to the travelers. Recently published estimates show that passenger revenues in June for 27 railroads in the eastern district have increased about six percent compared with June of a year ago. Revenues of the southern and western railroads, which have been operating longer on the two-cent basis, estimate increases of 15 and 20 percent respectively in their passenger revenues for the same period.

All of which would seem to indicate that the hue and cry which went up from the roads when the reduced fare order came out from the Interstate Commerce Commission may have been crying before the milk was spilled. If one may judge from the June revenues of the eastern roads and the larger increases of roads operating longer under the low rate, the carriers will quickly become reconciled to the ICC mandate. The reduction of fare has certainly been an inducement to travelers who have been of late years unaccustomed to patronize the rails. It is obvious to anyone watching the Seaboard trains roll through that passenger traffic has greatly improved on this road. It is gratifying to see Pullman and coach windows with faces peering out—something quite rare in summer in the past few years.

FRONT PAGE ADVERTISING FOR MOORE COUNTY

A Moore county farm made the front pages of New York papers and a national radio hook-up this week. It all had to do with an advertisement placed in a magazine by Julian T. Bishop, of Greenwich, Conn., who owns the farm. Mr. Bishop says in his advertisement that it's for sale if President Roosevelt is reelected. The story appears on Page 1 of this week's Pilot.

tor on the radio, made quite a speech on the subject of Mr. Bishop on Tuesday night, and in this instance one is inclined to agree with Mr. Carter. He didn't seem to approve of the spirit behind the ad. He allowed how there may be many people who feel as Bishop does about Mr. Roosevelt, but that it's hardly the American spirit to up and move out if things don't go to suit—that it would be pretty tough on the poor old USA if everyone who opposes Mr. Roosevelt crossed over into Canada in the event Mr. Farley puts his man over in November.

But, as Boke said, it's a swell way to advertise a farm for sale. To the best of our knowledge and belief, it's the first time a piece of Moore county farmland has reached metropolitan front pages and a national radio broadcast. Thanks for the publicity, Julian.

Grains of Sand

"TO DAVID"
I would rather be the father
Of a certain boy I know
Than have the fuss and bother
Of mansions full of "dees".

For his love and adoration
I would gladly give my all
Of fame or social station
And count the cost but small.

His every smile brings joy to me,
Far more than you would dream,
Unless you too a father be
And know just what I mean.

'Tis true he grieves me now and then,
By foolish word and action,
Until I wonder if and when
He'll drive me to distraction.

I know ere long he will be grown,
So swiftly pass the years,
Ah, then he'll wander far from home
And who will dry my tears?

No matter what the Fates decree,
Of this one thing I'm sure,
My love for him, his love for me
Will for all time endure.

—"The Father"

"With Georgia out of the running and with competing states showing a light production, it looks encouraging for Carolina peach producers this season," observed W. M. Scott, director of peach marketing for American Fruit Growers, in predicting that the yield in North and South Carolina this summer will be not less than 75 per cent of the 1935 crop.

Declaring that the Carolina peaches are the "finest grown" he pointed out that they come into competition with peaches from Arkansas and Southern Illinois and that "both of these states will have a light crop this year."

Believe it or not—a North Carolina road burned in two during a forest fire.

The road, in Washington county peat and vegetable matter with a top layer of mineral soil. It was burned for nearly two miles, the flames eating out the peat and causing the top to cave in.

Judge J. M. Windham was showing the Swett property on U. S. Highway No. 1 near Niagara to some prospects the other day, a prominent New York business man and his wife. After looking over the premises they sat down on the porch to talk things over. As they chatted something stirred in the bushes nearby, and a deer sprang out. "Sold," cried the lady. "This is the place we're looking for. Only overnight from New York and deer at your front door."

Riding bicycles on sidewalks is likely to be dangerous. A five-year old boy ran out of the doorway of a building on East Broad street, Southern Pines the other day, smack into an older boy tearing by on his wheel. The youngster was knocked down, suffered cuts and bruises. If Southern Pines has no ordinance against bicycling on sidewalks, it should have.

The Pilot had a mystery this week. It found a leg of lamb leaning up against the front of the building. Inquiries revealed no knowledge of the owner. The meat stayed there for several hours, finally disappeared just about the time we had made up our mind to take it home for the dog.

Watch your cigarettes and matches. A total of 330 forest fires last month caused $71,488 worth of damage in the state and blame for 115 of these fires was placed on careless smokers.
