Farm and Home Week To Follow 4-H Course

Entertaining and Instruction Features on Two Weeks Program at State College

Arrangements have been completed for making Farm and Home Week this year the best ever held in North Carolina, according to John W. Goodman, secretary of the week.

The program, filled with a wide variety of entertaining and instructive features, will open at State College, Raleigh, on Monday afternoon, July 27, and continue through Friday, July 31.

Farm and Home Week will follow the 4-H short course, July 22-27, at which hundreds of North Carolina's outstanding 4-H club members will enjoy a week of fun and fellowship while studying worth while things about working, playing, and living on the farm.

Special efforts have been expended to make Farm and Home Week appeal to farm men as well as farm women. Goodman said, and State College extension service workers are urging all North Carolina farmers to attend the week if they can.

Not only will they have a good opportunity to study with experts the better methods of farming now advocated, but they will also have a week's vacation from their farms that will be "good for the soul," Goodman stated.

He also pointed out that they will gather valuable pointers about the new farm program from addresses to be delivered by notable speakers from Washington and members of the State College extension services.

The women's program has been well filled with recreation, demonstrations, and class work, he continued. They will study foods, nutrition, clothing, home improvement, home and farm management, and many other things of importance to rural women.

The rural electrification classes and exhibits are designed to help both men and women with problems in regard to the installation and use of electricity on the farmstead and in the rural home.

CLARKS VISIT NANCY WRENN GRANDFATHER MOUNTAIN

Mr. and Mrs. Virgil Page Clark and Clement V. Wrenn spent last week-end at Blowing Rock. While in the mountains, they visited Mrs. Clark's daughter, Nancy Wrenn, who is spending the summer at Camp Yonahlossee on Grandfather Mountain.
