

Buying of School Books Will Start Next Week

State Department Gets Under Way with Purchases Aug. 12th at Carthage

The County Board of Education is cooperating with the State in a program that will make it possible for pupils to rent all of their basal and supplementary books, announces H. Lee Thomas, county superintendent of schools. This will eliminate the former practice of renting each book separately.

Under this new plan the basal books and supplementary readers will be rented for a stipulated fee, which shall be not more than one-third the retail price of the books used by the pupils. Each pupil must rent all of his books or buy all books. It will not be possible to rent part of the books and buy the remainder.

In order to carry out the program, pupils will be given an opportunity to sell the books they now own. From one-fourth to one half the retail price of each book will be allowed on usable copies. There will be no cash payments. Pupils will receive credit slips that can be used as part payment of the rental fee at the opening of school.

The following books will be purchased:

1. All elementary books that are now being used in the county, except Drawing, Writing, and Spelling.

2. A-1 high school books now being used in the county except English Literature, English Composition, and French. (New books in these subjects have recently been adopted.)

Beauties In The Kitchen

All that is modern in the house is personified in the 1936 Frigidaire which recently went on display here. With the revolutionary "meter-miser," a mechanical unit that cuts operating cost to the bone, the new Frigidaire offers hitherto unheard of economy, style, capacity and freezing ability. Lilyan Craft, left, demonstrates it for Jerry Mitchell, a visitor to Frigidaire's famous experimental kitchen.

From 1676 until 1907, this ruin of the tower at the back of the church was all that remained of the Jamestown settlement after Bacon's army burnt the town. At the time of the Tercentenary celebration in 1907, however, the church was restored in the original form.
