Theatre

Rex Stoot's famous sleepy sleuth comes to rib-cracking life on the screen in the grandest mirth-and-murder movie in months. He's the favorite man-hunter of millions, the famous beer-loving, murder-solving amateur detective—Nero Wolfe! Movie audiences will meet him for the first time in "Meet Nero Wolfe," the attraction at the Southern Pines Theatre, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, Aug. 10, 11, 12, with a Tuesday matinee.

With just a bottle—or two—of beer, Wolfe solves baffling murders committed with a Golf Club and a needle. He can make a four-flusher out of Philo Vance and a sissy out of Sherlock Holmes. As the old saying goes, it's fun to be fooled by Nero Wolfe!

As Nero Wolfe, the crime sleuth, portrayed by Edward Arnold, he emerges as an entertaining, beer-imbibing, orchid cultivating, stay-at-home, who solves his mysteries entirely with his brains. His feet, his hands, his legs, his eyes are personified in Lionel Stander, whose performance wakens memories of the job he did in "Mr. Deeds Goes To Town," and whose screen stature will increase as a result of his portrayal. Wolfe is interested primarily in fees, and his amused and chuckling reactions to the anxiety of the suspects is in itself genuine entertainment.

For those who missed it before and for those who have requested to see it once more, the Southern Pines Theatre, by popular demand, is bringing back, on Thursday and Friday, Aug. 13, 14, with a Thursday matinee, that unforgettable picture, "State Fair," the picture that brought Will Rogers his greatest fame. Remember the thrill "State Fair" gave your heart? Remember how you laughed at Will Rogers in his greatest role, how Janet Gaynor and Lew Ayres stirred your heart with their summer romance, how you thrilled to the glamour and excitement of the great state fair? Rogers' role in the film has been pronounced the greatest—the beloved humorist ever created while the cast also features in addition to Miss Gaynor and Ayers, a galaxy of favorites including Sally Eilers, Norman Foster, Louise Dresser, Frank Carven and Victor Jory.

George Raft and Delores Costello Barrymore are co-starred in "Yours For The Asking," comedy-romance of a gambler who decides to learn the ways of society, coming to the Southern Pines Theatre, Saturday (one day only) August 15th, matinee and night.

The picture boasts a supporting cast of such screen favorites as Ida Lupino, Reginald Owen, James Gleason, Lynne Overman, Richard "Skeets" Gallagher and Edgar Kennedy.

"Yours For The Asking" places Raft in a story similar in many respects to that of one of his greatest hits, "Night After Night." It marks his return to the type of role which the movie public likes best for him; the tough egg with the smooth manner.

Miss Barrymore, who stepped immediately back into her former leading place in filmdom after a five-year absence, in "Little Lord Fauntleroy," is also given a role exceptionally suited to her unusual talents.

Comedy situations are built up by the three sides, Miss Lupino, and a wandering salesman of ten-cent gadgets, Reginald Owen, who poses as Miss Lupino's aristocratic uncle for purposes of the plot.

Lynne Overman, James Gleason and Edgar Kennedy are the comedy-creating right-hand men of the big-time gambler.

Sherwin-Williams At Your Service!

"Time To Paint Up" is no longer a job for the gay old springtime only. It has become a year-round proposition and may be indulged in whenever your color-sense cries out for expression, and when it comes to any kind of inside painting job—big or little—Stutts Supply Company is . . . at your service!

Here you will get expert practical advice, and we will show you our big Book of Colors, which is crammed full of fascinating painting suggestions. It describes all kinds of paints and finishes for every purpose, and even tells you how to use these yourself—whether you are going to decorate a bean pot or a wall panel. If it is a job for a master painter, this book will help you to plan with him intelligently.
