BUTLER AND PAGE

If you were to go down into the Sandhills of North Carolina and inquire as to which of two-three families of prominent name and lasting fame in North Carolina was the more responsible for the development of that territory from a desert to a garden of roses, some of them would answer that neither of these mentioned.

But to BION BUTLER, a publicist, a relentless publicist, they give chief credit.

Mr. Butler, coming down early in his life from Pennsylvania, saw something in that empire of pines and sand that no other eye had ever seen.

He saw the soil possibilities; the resort possibilities; the agricultural and horticultural possibilities; and deciding to plant himself in these dunes, he took his pen and began to emblazon to the world the potential and latent resources resident in the Sandhills.

And for decades, here and yonder and everywhere, he publicized in print and proclaimed by word of mouth and got friends to talk about the Sandhills doing a job in press-agency which present-day prophets of the glories of that section credit with having spelled the difference between a continuing plain of barrenness and infertility and the present continent of expansion and development throughout that entire section of North Carolina.

Holding public office for personal gain or that of his particular people and community was never charged to the late FRANK PAGE, long chairman of the North Carolina Highway Commission.

It is a common occurrence with ordinary public servants.

In fact, so common did it used to be that men ran for places on boards of county commissioners in order to get roads through their farms and localities in which they lived and owned property.

Mr. Page came up to his high political appointment from Moore county where he and his eminent brothers had been born, were reared and had given leadership to the professional development of that great productive territory.

BUT FOR THE FULL TIME MR. PAGE WAS ON THIS BOARD, HE NEVER ALLOWED A SINGLE BUCKET OF CONCRETE TO BE POURED ON A ROAD IN MOORE COUNTY.

Even when his distinguished brother had been buried at old Bethesda church, a mile from Aberdeen, he refused petitions to have a hard surface road built to that shrine of this notable American.

One admires such rigidity in public service and the straight-laced conception of duty in respect to holding oneself aloof from using political place for personal emoluments, directly or remotely.

In this case it would seem, however, that Mr. Page stood so erectly that he leaned back a bit.

750,000 Acres of Forests in the South Now Protected From Fire

AMERICA'S RED HARVEST

STRUTHERS BURT, of Southern Pines and Wyoming, distinguished author, has presented some facts about the "Red Harvest" in America which should supply food for thought in connection with National Fire Prevention Week, beginning next Monday.

"Every five years, in dollars alone, our loss in forest fires is somewhere around $350,000,000. Mr. Burt writes in Today weekly. That fact alone is enough to justify every reasonable measure of fire prevention.

But that is only a part of the total forest loss, and perhaps a small part, when one figures on the future of the Nation as well as the present, for as Mr. Burt says, it does not take in a half dozen other losses which, although they cannot be computed in dollars and cents, "are equally disastrous economically—soil erosion, loss of water and moisture; even temporary, although prolonged, changes in climate".

The crimson crop of fire in the forests, Mr. Burt writes, is one crop that never fails.

He gives additional startling figures. He says that fire coupled with widespread cutting of the trees, has destroyed 300,000,000 of the original 822,238,000 acres of heavy wooded areas in the United States.

Latest available statistics covering the causes of fires in the forests, Mr. Burt points out, show the following averages for a five-year period: lightning, 275,026; railroads, 180,919; campers, 281,018; smokers, 710,859; incendiary, 1,305,288; lumbering, 221,516; unknown, 459,030; miscellaneous, 443,033.

"In other words," concludes the writer, "even if we credit nature with all the unknown and miscellaneous fires, human beings, American citizens, were responsible for three times as many fires as any other agencies, and of these human beings a million were firebugs".

NEW BOOKS ORDERED BY SOUTHERN PINES LIBRARY

The October meeting of the trustees of the Southern Pines Library was held on Tuesday afternoon of this week. The librarian's report showed an attendance of 234 during September, and a circulation of 343 volumes. The following list of books was authorized for purchase. Fiction: "Orums Along the Mohawk," by Walter D. Edmonds; "Whiteoak Harvest," by Mazo de la Roche; "White Banners," by Lloyd C. Douglas. Mysteries: "Harvard Has a Homicide," by Timothy Fuller, and "The Constant God," by Aufus King. Recent gifts include "Old Man Greenlaw," by Kenneth Kempton.

Further gifts of books, particularly of recent publications, would be most gratefully received at this time when the opening of the season will increase the demand on the library's resources. A second copy of "Gone with the Wind," by Margaret Mitchell would be especially welcome. The demand for this book is very great, and the copy now in circulation is already reserved far in advance.

Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Clark of Cleveland, Ohio visited friends in Southern Pines and Pinehurst this week enroute to Florida.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Ketchum, a boy, eight pounds, last Friday morning. He has been named William Edward.

Mr. and Mrs. John Ruggles and sons, Jack and Tommy of Raleigh, and Mrs. Carrie Plummer of Wilmington were guests of Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Ruggles Sunday.

Timber Saved is Valuable Contribution of Raw Materials to Southern Industry

A total of 75,000,000 acres of southern forest land well protected from the ravages of fire is the contribution of the United States Forest Service and southern state forestry commissions to the observance of National Fire Prevention Week, according to Joseph C. Kircher, Southern Regional Forester for the United States, headquartered in Atlanta, Georgia.

The acreage of protected southern forest lands of all classes has increased by approximately 36,000,000 acres in the past three years. Forester Kircher stated. He pointed out that the timber thus saved is a valuable contribution of raw materials to feed the rapidly expanding pulp industry in the South, in addition to furnishing basic material for the important lumber and naval stores industries.

The quality of fire protection rendered southern forest lands has, with the assistance of the CCC, been raised to higher standards through an increase in the number of lookout towers to detect fires, improvements in communication systems to enable rapid mobilization of men and equipment, and the construction of roads for quick transportation to fire lines, according to Forester Kircher.

Mr. Kircher stated that North Carolina forest lands receiving organized protection from destruction by fire had increased by more than 10,000,000 acres since 1933 when CCC aid for this work became available.

N. C. FIRES CAUSE $24,798 LOSS IN AUGUST

Forest fires did $24,798 worth of damage in 58 counties co-operating in prevention during August, the Department of Conservation and Development reports, which was the lowest loss estimate for any month since February. The 71 August fires burned over 19,469 acres with an average loss of $1.28 per acre while in July there were 117 fires which burned 13,710 acres with an average loss of $1.94 per acre, making a total of $26,576 damage. Careless smokers were charged with starting 25 of the 71 fires last month with incendiaries accounting for another 14.
