The Church at the Head of Rockfish

Copies of this book, the work of the late Bion H. Butler, former editor of The Pilot and best known as "The Sage of the Sandhills," are now available at the Sandhill Book Shop in Southern Pines. The supply, exhausted for some time, has been replenished by the book's publishers, Grosset & Dunlap, and copies will be on sale from now through the Christmas holidays.

No more suitable gift can be thought of for one desirous of presenting something with local color. The story of Aberdeen's old church which has been the center of development of this section of the Sandhills, its influence nation-wide in the last century, is beautifully and interestingly told by one whose body now lies beneath the shade of Old Bethesda's stately pines.

The book is beautifully bound, and contains numerous halftones of early settlers of this section, of old landmarks, of the ancient edifice and the sacred grounds which surround it. It is a history of this neighborhood which all who love the Sandhills should read.
