Mrs. Leland Writes Book of Old South

"Crossin' Over" from Pen of Mother of Mrs. E. T. McKeithen a Tribute to the Ex-Slave Servant

An attractive and interesting book which bids fair to be in demand during the Christmas shopping season is on display in the windows of the Hayes' Bookshop, the work of Mrs. Effie Williams Leland, mother of Mrs. Edwin T. McKeithen of Aberdeen and Mrs. Frank Wilder and John Leland of Charleston, S. C. Its title is "Crossin' Over," and it was published by The State Company of Columbia, S. C.

The book has been highly praised in reviews appearing in the Charleston News & Courier and the Montgomery, Alabama, Advertiser. Says the former:

"'Crossin' Over' is a tribute to the negro servant of the old South who, reared in slavery, remained faithful and devoted under changed conditions. Mrs. Leland knows her Southern negro, his virtues and his shortcomings, and she has written of him with humor and sympathy. She has been successful in re-creating her period, in capturing the atmosphere of post-reconstruction days, and in giving her characters distinction and personality. The little tale is written largely in dialogue and moves with a refreshing ease and simplicity. The dialect is spontaneous and unaffected."

Mrs. Leland, who is now visiting her daughter in Aberdeen, is the widow of the late W. A. Leland, prominent hydro-electric engineer of his day who built some of the largest plants in the south, including the Blewett Falls plant of the Carolina Power & Light Co., at Rockingham. Her father was Major Jerry Williams, an attorney and Member of Congress from Alabama.

$10,000 FIRE LOSS AT PINEHURST LIVERY STABLE

I. C. Sledge, treasurer of Pinehurst, Inc., informed The Pilot that the damage amounted to approximately $10,000, covered my insurance, and that there has not as yet been any discussion of rebuilding plans. For the present the horses will be stabled in the smaller frame barn located beside the burned structure.

Tuesday night's blaze served as the initiation of Pinehurst's new fire engine, the latest in fire-fighting equipment, which had been delivered here but a few days before. The efficiency of this apparatus, plus the splendid work of the firemen, prevented the spread of flames to adjacent buildings and to gasoline storage tanks located in the vicinity of the stables.
