TWO VALUABLE ORGANIZATIONS

There are two little publicized organizations in the Sandhills which are doing so much good...

One of these is the Moore County Educational Foundation. Offspring of the Kiwanis Club, this foundation has been functioning for some 15 years...

Each year applications are received from graduates of high schools in the county who desire to attend institutions of higher learning...

Richard Tufts has been the tireless treasurer of the fund for years and has the record of just how many young people have been aided by it...

A few years ago Mrs. Mortimer G. Nichols of Southern Pines conceived the idea of a birthday club to aid the Moore County Hospital...

It's seldom that one receives a birthday card that he or she doesn't "take the hint" and send Mrs. Nichols a check...

The idea originally was to stimulate interest among the younger generation in the institution at Pinehurst...

Other Birthday Clubs have been started in the county fashioned along the same line. You are cordially invited to join one.

PEACE AT ANY REASONABLE PRICE

Despite all opposition thrown against it by Administration forces, the Ludlow resolution for war only by a vote of the American people showed remarkable strength in the House.

The main object of the bill was to prevent Congress and the President—any Congress and any president—from taking hasty action in precipitately dragging this country into a foreign war...

Let us examine the surprisingly heavy vote for this allegedly extreme measure in the light of the following historical facts. At no time in the life of our country has any president rushed the Nation into a foreign war, nor has Congress at any time voted a declaration of war until after the public demand for war had drowned out every opposing voice...

The result indicates a very healthy trend toward peace at any reasonable price. It further indicates that to Congress it is no longer sufficient for one man—any man—to solemnly promise to keep us out of war. It is not enough, according to the 188 who voted for the bill, for Congress—any Congress—a mere handful of men, and being men vulnerable to human weaknesses, themselves beyond fighting age, to be able at will to lead our sons into the trenches of blood and murder.

A GOVERNOR'S MESSAGE

"Today our most important task is to stimulate and develop a genuine co-operation between the principal functional groups in our society..."

"Business recession, I believe, can best be overcome by a policy on the part of government which will promote greater co-operation and understanding between business, the workingman, the farmer and the consumer..."

"Government must instill in all groups faith and confidence in the future. In turn, each of these groups must trust in and co-operate with government and with each other..."

"If one group is not adequately compensated and protected, the others sooner or later will suffer. Business cannot prosper at the cost of labor. Labor cannot prosper by destroying business..."

SAFETY CONSIDERED FIRST IN AUTOMOBILE ACCESSORIES

Modern automobile accessories are designed with three major purposes in mind—comfort, safety, and convenience—and the most important of these is safety, according to M. D. Douglas, manager of Chevrolet's parts and accessories department.

"The motoring public, along with civic-minded organizations throughout the country, is paying more and more attention to safety on the highways," Mr. Douglas declared.

"Chevrolet accessories are custom-built, engineered especially to Chevrolet cars. They add to the inherent beauty of the car and they increase driving comfort and convenience.

Their primary function, however, is to give Chevrolet drivers the advantages of the latest developments in safety devices."

Grains of Sand

Stanley Reed, named last week to the United States Supreme Court by President Roosevelt, was a Pinehurst guest last spring. He came down in the party of Attorney General Homer Cummings for a week of golf.

There's an after-holiday lull in the Sandhills each year which sends everyone's spirits down. We're always convinced the season is going to be a flop—after such a nice start.

Cheer up. We hear this week that the folks are beginning to come again. We've seen several hotel men smiling. The golf courses are getting busier.

You've just been going through the calm after the Christmas storm.

Notwithstanding the steadily growing theory that the government should take care of everything, it appears that the generous impulses of Americans of means have not been damped, says the New York Herald-Tribune.

There were two unusually large bequests in 1937: one $50,000,000 from Charles Hayden for the education of boys and young men...

American railroads are an example of the widespread ownership of American industry. Reports filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission show that there are approximately 855,000 railroad stockholders and an estimated 1,000,000 bond holders.

The current number of the magazine, Pictorial Review, has a murder mystery story laid right here in the Sandhills. In fact the murder is committed in "Sandhurst," and Aberdeen, Pinehurst and Southern Pines are mentioned without equivocation.

The story is by Leslie Ford, a prolific writer of detective stories in many of the popular magazines. In real life Leslie Ford is Mrs. Ford Brown, who lives in Annapolis, Maryland and who used to visit Southern Pines frequently in the day when a friend of hers, another prominent woman writer, Maude Parker, now Mrs. E. L. Pavenstedt of Washington, D. C., lived here.

The Saturday Evening Post of January 15 has an editorial on "Way Down South in the Land of Gold." They tell us "Six mines in North Carolina, all old, have been revived and are producing one million two hundred thousand dollars in gold annually..."

Mrs. Hugh David Cameron and family have bought the Sam Richardson home and expect to have the old house torn down and a model home put up on the grounds as the plans indicate.
