W. J. (BILL) ADAMS, JR.

A native of Carthage, W. J. Adams, Jr., this week was named assistant attorney general for North Carolina, to succeed the late Lee Overman Gregory. Tall Bill Adams (six feet, three inches) will well fill the $4,500 post. Born in Carthage September 15, 1908, Bill Adams still calls it his home. His father, the late Supreme Court justice, practised law in Carthage from 1874 until his appointment to the Court. For the past six years, Bill Adams has been practising law in Rocky Mount.

Major Ray Perkins Visits Pine Needles

Radio and Screen Star Among Newcomers at Knollwood for Army Holiday

The Pine Needles this week continued to be a meeting place for many Army officers and privates stationed in this vicinity and for their relatives coming to visit them.

Major Ray Perkins—known to screen and radio fans as just "Ray Perkins"—was not only a guest but an impromptu entertainer with several piano selections. Among those most impressed by the Major, now with First Army headquarters, was little Betsy Cox, daughter of Capt. and Mrs. Henry B. Cox, Jr., of Penlyn, Pa.

Among guests also were Major and Mrs. Jay Cooke of Philadelphia, the Major having been chairman of the Philadelphia Republican Committee before joining the 11th infantry of the 28th division.

Other newcomers included Mr. and Mrs. J. Brook Lessig of Pottstown, Pa., who entertained Lieut. Col. Fred H. Kelly and their son, Lieut. Brook Lessig of the 28th division; Dr. and Mrs. John Maher and daughter, Madlyn; Mr. and Mrs. Spencer Robertson, M. Duane Whitney of New Jersey; Dr. Maher is chief surgeon of Marmouth Memorial Hospital, Long Branch, N. J. Also, Brig. Gen. Eric Fisher Wood from Fort Bragg, prominent Pittsburgh architect.
