vation principles with dissemination of knowledge concerning them.

A club was started in Moore county in the federation's early days, he said, but didn't last. "I think you folks are on the right track and will make a go of it this time," the speaker said.

He emphasized the value of regular meetings, a definite program and a broad membership. "Until very recently the game and fish set-up in North Carolina was a pretty undependable thing," Stevens said.

The Sandhills Wildlife club, formed with six members about a month ago, already has 35 or 40 and is growing fast, it was revealed by President John Ferguson.

Russell Lorenson, C. L. Worsham, John Ferguson and Morris Johnson were in charge of the meeting. All joined in a lively dis-cussing, frying delicious golden-brown fish and hush puppies to go with the slaw, potato salad and hot coffee.

late husband, founder of the Jug-town pottery and a pioneer in the renaissance of native North Carolina handicrafts. Mrs. Busbee, also gave a talk on Mr. Busbee, his life and his work, described as one of the most interesting and memorable of the week's many events.

The meetings, centering around the Sir Walter hotel, brought to the state's capital for an unusual series of events many of the state's most distinguished citizens.

old Santa will take a tour through town at the head of a Christmas parade. Plans for this have not been completed.

On Wednesday, December 21, the Elks lodge will hold its annual Christmas party—on the town park this year, instead of on the grounds of the Elks home.

Santa Claus will spend the afternoon, hearing the Christmas wishes of every little boy and girl and giving each a gift in advance of stocking-hanging time.

This will not change in any way the Elks' private observance of Christmas, in which they give baskets of food to needy persons of this area through the Council of Social Agencies.

Another act of the Chamber of Commerce toward the town's Christmas beauty will be the lighting of the handsome holly tree in front of the post office.

All over town, it is expected that decorations this month will be the loveliest in years. Along with the window display contest, the Chamber is sponsoring a contest for residential Christmas lighting.

Flack

Mrs. L. D. McDonald and Mrs. R. M. Palmer lost their last Saturday night, when their pocket-books disappeared from their parked car as they went for a few minutes into the Church of Wide Fellowship.

Two apparent suicide attempts have been made by Flack in jail, said Carthage Chief Bunn Cameron. They were not, however, very serious ones and the youth hurt himself only slightly in one case, none at all in the other. He "scratched" himself with a razor blade, which he had concealed on his person and which was promptly taken away; and later thrust his face into a basin of water—an apparent attempt to drown himself which he soon gave up.

Flack, formerly of Dayton, Ohio, has lived in Southern Pines since his discharge from the army about two years ago, it was revealed. He worked for a time at the Aberdeen mill. Since November 4 he had been employed as a bellhop. He is married to a Pinehurst girl, whom he met while in service, stationed at Fort Bragg, and they have a baby less than a year old.
