

4-H Achievement Awards Will Mark Christmas Event

Boys and Girls Will Meet Saturday At Carthage

Moore County 4-H clubbers will celebrate a dual event at 2 p. m., Saturday at the Community building at Carthage—their annual Achievement day, and their Christmas party.

Boys and girls of Moore County clubs who have been adjudged winners of this year's contests will receive their certificates and pins. Others will be honored for the completion of projects on which they have worked throughout the year.

Contest winners among the girls have been announced as follows by Miss Barbara Connolly, assistant home demonstration agent in charge of girls' 4-H club work: Olean Seawell, Highfalls club, Farm and Home electric; Patricia Melvin, Jackson Springs club, home and grounds beautification; Gloria Parks, Carthage club, clothing achievement; Margaret Grimm, Carthage club, tree study; Peggy Blue, Farm Life club, production and marketing; Helen Rose Pressley, Carthage club, poultry.

The program will include games and Christmas refreshments.

MEANEST MAN

Mr. and Mrs. D. F. Campbell, elderly Lakeview couple, were visited by a stranger Monday of last week who frightened them out of a small hoard of savings carefully laid aside in the event of sickness.

The small moustached man made his way into their house under pretense of doing religious work. He told them to bring him their Bible, and what money they had in the house. The old people, frightened and shy, did as they were told.

The visitor cautioned them to mention his visit to no one, and at the end of three days their money and Bible would be returned. At the end of seven days, he said, they would both be well.

As the realization came to them that they would never see stranger, Bible or money again, they told their neighbors of the happening, and in that community the impostor is now regarded as the candidate for Meanest Man of the Year.
