

Hemmer Honored By Photographers Meeting Sunday

The Carolina Press Photographers association met at the Pinehurst Country club Sunday for luncheon, followed by a business session. Approximately 30 members were present, including working staffmen on state dailies, free lance news photographers and representatives of the AP and INS and the Carolina journalism faculty. Visiting wives and other guests brought the number up to about 40.

Co-hosts for the occasion were to have been Emerson Humphrey of Southern Pines and John G. Hemmer of Pinehurst. Mr. Hemmer, however, could not be present as he was called away on a State News Bureau assignment. Assisting Mrs. Hemmer as hostesses were Virginia Simkins of the Pinehurst Outlook and Valerie Nicholson of the Southern Pines Pilot.

A feature of the occasion was the presentation to Mrs. Hemmer of a silver plate for her husband, engraved "To Our Finest Friend—John G. Hemmer." Mr. Hemmer was active in the organization of the group and was its first president, serving for two terms.

Main project of the business was the completion of plans for the second annual short course in news photography to be sponsored by the association in April in cooperation with the University of North Carolina. Gratified by the success of the first short course held last year, the members are planning this year for the attendance of some 200 professionals in photography and affiliated interests. Sessions of the three-day course will be conducted by a faculty of experts.

Hugh Morton, of Wilmington, president, led the meeting, at which were also present members from Chapel Hill, Rocky Mount, Raleigh, Durham, Burlington, Winston-Salem, Asheville, Greensboro, Charlotte, Southern Pines and other places.

Kiwanians Hear Rev. Charles Covell Describe Church Stand On Atomic War

The meeting of the Sandhills Kiwanis Club, starting out on the usual note of friendly gaiety, as the weekly golf balls were handed over to Dr. T. A. Cheatham last Wednesday, turned to more serious things when the speaker of the day, the Rev. Charles Covell, gave to the company the message of the Federal Council of Churches on the subject "The Christian Conscience and Weapons of Destruction."

Introduced by Paul Dana, Mr. Covell, who is rector of Emmanuel Episcopal Church in Southern Pines, read excerpts from the report of the church body and gave his interpretation of some of the main points.

Mr. Covell, "cannot give themselves to the support of a war that casts aside all moral restrictions." He said that he believes the way to get rid of war does not lie in the elimination of any type of weapon but rather on moral, political and economic planes. To accept the inevitability of war is strategically, morally, and spiritually wrong.

Quoting from the Federal Council's report he said: "We are Christians who are also citizens of the United States. We cannot and would not escape from the responsibilities and the limitations of this destiny which we accept as God's purpose for us. . . We have to recognize that the overwhelming majority of Christians, after the earliest days when the Christian community was a little persecuted minority in a pagan society, without social responsibilities, have held that there are times when Christians should take the sword and fight as very imperfect servants of God's justice."

Total war has developed in the recent conflicts, Dr. Covell said, both in the sense of total mobilization of all human and material resources, and also in the sense that all moral restraints are thrown aside and everything is subordinated to military expediency. Here, in the second sense, said the speaker, is the moment when Christians must take a stand; they can never consent to total war in the second sense. Military victory cannot be an end in itself; victory at the price of utter moral destruction is not victory but defeat.

We need to work in our own country against the evils that still exist here, to build up the forces of democracy. We must, also, never give up the attempt to reach the Russian people through friendliness and goodwill. They share our common needs and hopes and fears; they, too must want peace. . . we must never give up trying to reach them.

The report concluded that there was no way for Christians to advocate the elimination of any weapons of destruction, though they must always urge restraint in their use, especially against innocent unarmed peoples. However, a positive approach to the whole question was urged, with emphasis on every means by which understanding between men might be advanced to solve the world's problems that lead to war.

These were the main points of an address that stirred its hearers with its profound approach to the great question of today. Previous to Mr. Covell's speech, a new member, Norris Hodgkins, Jr. was inducted by Talbot Johnson. Guests of the day were recognized—Jack Taylor Jr., now eligible, it was told, for his Eagle Scout badge, the Rev. D. W. Blount and the Rev. W. S. Golden of Carthage, Jimmy Blake and O. D. Griffin of Southern Pines.

BAKED BEAN SUPPER

Women of the Pinehurst Community church are sponsoring a baked bean supper in the cafeteria of the Pinehurst High school Saturday from 6 to 8 p. m. Tickets are on sale at Hobbs' Grocery store, the Carolina pharmacy and the Pinehurst pharmacy at Pinehurst. Proceeds will be used for church purposes.

Improved methods helped North Carolina farmers produce 81,955,000 bushels of corn in 1950 on the same acreage that grew 77,525,000 bushels in 1949.

Peach Growers Hold Meeting At Mid Pines Club

The North Carolina Peach school and annual meeting of peach growers' organizations were held Thursday at the Mid Pines club, sponsored by the N. C. Mutual Peach Growers' Society, Inc., with about 100 attending the sessions.

The peach growers began their registration Wednesday afternoon and evening, heard speakers at sessions held Thursday morning and afternoon, attended the annual meeting of the society at 4 p.m., Thursday and a banquet at 8:30 that night.

C. D. Matthews, president of the N. C. Mutual Peach Growers' Society, Inc., was assisted with arrangements for the program by J. Claude Epting, agricultural agent of the Seaboard Air Line railroad, which has been instrumental in developing the annual peach school and meeting, and promoting interest in it among the growers and those of affiliated interests.

Rotarians See Color Movie of Camp Durant Life

A color film on Camp Durant, the Occoneechee Council camp in Wake county, held much interest for Southern Pines Rotarians when shown to them at their luncheon meeting Friday by Ray McMullen of Southern Pines, Moore District camping and activities chairman of the Boy Scouts.

The program, held at the Village Inn, saluted to imminence of Boy Scout week during which Scouting observes its 41st anniversary.

The movie showed the many happy activities of Boy Scouts of the 12 Occoneechee Council counties (including Moore) at camp. A number of beautiful scenes showed the waterfront program; the "budgy system" by which the safety of the boys is ensured as they learn to swim; canoeing, rescue work and other activities of the advanced swimmers.

The sleeping cabins, camp lodge and other buildings were shown and Mr. McMullen told of plans for new construction at the camp. The program was presented by C. S. Patch, Jr.

Among the visiting Rotarians was a group of four from Carthage, making up attendance and catching up on the opposition in the attendance contest now under way between the Carthage and Southern Pines clubs. Secretary Russell Lorensen reported 99.2 per cent attendance for January.

Visitors and their home clubs were: M. G. Boyette, Wilbur Currie, C. B. Shaw and Rudy Womack, Carthage; L. M. Tate, Blowing Rock; C. B. Winn, Bill Brown, Troy; J. L. Castleberry, Rockingham; Earl Sprague, Bridgeport, Conn.; Al Loeser, Fairfield, Conn.; Margaret Bailey, student guest; the speaker, Ray McMullen, and Dick Ray, who handled the projector.

Appearing on the Thursday morning program were Dr. Leon Havis, senior horticulturist of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, who spoke on "Trends in Peaches," and Dr. R. W. Cumming, associate director of the N. C. Experiment Station, whose subject was "Research Expanded for Peaches."

In the afternoon Dr. F. S. Potts, of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, was heard on the topic "Concentrate Spray and Spraying." Frank P. Jeter, N. C. Extension Service agricultural editor, was the banquet speaker.

There were only 37 work stoppages in North Carolina due to labor-management disagreements in the 1944-50 biennium. This involved less than 1/3 of 1 per cent of work hours lost from the cause in the entire United States.
