Halloween Carnival At W. Southern Pines

Six or seven hundred West Southern Pines youngsters enjoyed the Halloween carnival held October 31, with the school as the center of operations. Principal J. B. Moore and the entire faculty supervised the activities.

On account of the rain, games and stunts were held inside the school. A $15 check given by the Southern Pines Rotary club was supplemented by a small amount from school funds to provide the essentials of the school-sponsored frolic—noisemakers, "funny faces" and prizes.

Winners of the costume contest were chosen through audience applause. Winning the biggest hand and receiving first prize was Wayne Davis, with Ann McDonald second.

Negro Girl Bonded For Grand Jury In Fatal Stabbing of Love Rival

Annie V. Brower, 18, waived hearing before Justice H. P. Kelly at Carthage Saturday morning, and was bound over for grand jury action in the death of Annie Lee Richardson, 21. Bond of $2,500 was set, which she made.

Annie admitted wielding the short sharp-bladed knife which killed not only Annie Lee but her unborn child, in an altercation at the Ambassador club, Jackson Hamlet, Sunday night of last week. However, she said she did it in self-defense.

Present for questioning by Justice Kelly were a number of eyewitnesses, also L. Z. Smith, fiance of Annie Lee Richardson, who had escorted Annie Brower to the club on the fatal night.

The Richardson girl, described by Pinehurst police as a student nurse at N. C. Sanatorium, had followed the couple to their rendezvous and the altercation followed. The stab wound which terminated two lives within a short time, soon after the pregnant girl had been admitted to Moore County hospital, cut an artery in her groin and ranged upward through her abdomen.

All parties were Negroes, residents of the Zion Grove community. Annie Brower, a maid at the Carolina hotel, Pinehurst, had been living in the hotel dormitory. After the stabbing she went to her parents' home at Zion Grove, where Pinehurst officers found and arrested her as she was preparing for bed.
