

CARTHAGE NEWS

WITH THE ARMED FORCES

Cpl. Sam C. Riddle, Jr., 24, of Carthage is due to become a civilian again this week. His parents are happily expecting him home following his discharge Thursday at Fort Bliss, Texas.

The discharge is more than a year overdue. His term of enlistment was to have ended in August 1950 but instead he was sent to Korea with other units of the Seventh Infantry. He landed at Inchon, plunged into battle, reached the Yalu river with the 17th Regimental Combat team, only unit to penetrate that far into North Korea, and had to fight his way out with the team when they were trapped by the communist advance.

He came home last summer on rotation furlough and has been stationed at Fort Bliss since it ended.

Cpl. E. M. Nicholson, USMC, who has been on Caribbean maneuvers for the past two months, was due to have landed at Norfolk November 18 but arrived two weeks early. He phoned his parents Saturday night from the Marine Air station at Cherry Point, where his outfit had just arrived after being flown from Roosevelt AFB, Puerto Rico.

The Rev. and Mrs. Tom King of Manly have two sons in service. One of them, Sgt. William King, has been in Korea for more than a year, with the 24th Infantry. The other, Cpl. Alexander King, is with an anti-aircraft battalion stationed at Fort Lewis, Wash. Both are graduates of West Southern Pines High school.

Cpl. Charlie M. Alston of Southern Pines was listed as one of 4,061 Korean combat veterans who arrived at San Francisco on rotation furlough last weekend.

FIRST AIR BLOODMOBILE

STARTS ERRAND OF MERCY

IT'S BLOOD OR DEATH—when badly wounded men are brought to the medics, and this picture was made to help realize that fact.

Watching the last drops trickle from the nearly empty bottle is Private Ray Dasser of Upper Darby, Pa., while the "patient" suffering from lack of blood is Roy Dunkelberger of Port Allegany, Pa. These men are with the 204th Medical Battalion attached to the 47th Infantry Division, Camp Rucker, Ala. The picture was made as part of the blood donor campaign here as the result of the critical shortage due to the Korean conflict.

The first "air bloodmobile," a C-120 Fairchild Packet aircraft fitted and equipped as an Armed Forces Blood Donor Point, was a feature of the recent Long Island Industrial Exposition at Roosevelt Field, Long Island. Manned by Air Force personnel from Mitchel Air Force Base under supervision of a Red Cross Medical Officer, the "air bloodmobile" will be part of an extensive exhibit depicting the need for and use of blood in the Armed Forces. Cooperative efforts of the Air Force, the Red Cross and the Fairchild Aircraft Company resulted in this flying blood collection point, which is capable of collecting more than 200 pints

Rotarians Hear Of UNC Course On World Events

Sessions Would Aid In Understanding International Scene

A University-sponsored program of institutes to help busy people keep up with world affairs was described to the Southern Pines Rotary club Friday by Keener C. Frazer, professor of political science at Chapel Hill.

A course entitled "The Struggle Between the East and West in 1951" will be offered in Southern Pines if there is sufficient demand, said Professor Frazer. It will consist of 12 sessions, one evening each week, with lecture and films on the following topics: 1, Frontiers of the Free World; 2, Russia; 3, The German Situation; 4, France; 5, Tito and Yugoslavia; 6, Turkey; 7, The Arab World; 8, Japan; 9, China and Communism; 10, India, Pakistan and Indo-China; 11, Malaya and Indonesia; 12, Defense of the Americas. The course emphasizes the interdependence of nations, a dominant factor in world events today, and assists toward understanding of the "news behind the headlines," said Professor Frazer.

He was aided in his presentation by Dr. Rhyne, of the University Extension department, which is cooperating with the political science department in putting on the course. Both were introduced by Garland Pierce as program chairman.

The Rotarians asked many questions and appeared much interested in helping to establish the course here.

The luncheon meeting was held at the Village Inn, with Herbert N. Cameron, president, in charge.
