100-Mile-An-Hour Race Through Town Ends In Arrest On Dead-End Street

Pleading nolo contendere to speeding 80 to 100 miles per hour, mostly within the city limits of Southern Pines, John D. Cameron, Negro, who gave his address as Oteen hospital, near Asheville, was handed a three-months road sentence in recorders court at Carthage Monday, suspended on payment of $150 fine and costs.

Southern Pines Police Chief C. E. Newton testified to a wild chase which took place Saturday about 10 p. m. as the police car tailed Cameron's late-model Mercury from Diggs cafe in West Southern Pines.

Starting off at high speed, Cameron in an effort to shake the police car tore along Hardin street, skidded wildly into a left turn, dashed back to Pennsylvania avenue to the Midland road. There, on a straightaway stretch heading back into town, Chief Newton said the police car's speedometer reached 95 "and the Mercury was leaving us behind."

Tearing along Broad street, the Mercury made a skidding right turn into Vermont avenue, which dead-ends after three blocks.

Cameron sighted the dead-end just in time, braked down hard, skidded half a block on the sandy street—where tire-marks still show this week—and came to a stop just one inch short of a clump of trees.

Officer E. R. Baker was at the wheel of the police car, with Chief Newton as passenger, as it hit the highest speed of its career so far.

Fortunately, little traffic was encountered, though a couple of cars meeting the pursued and pursuers drew quickly aside in startlement as the cars flashed by, and on Vermont avenue house-holders rushed to their doors to see what was doing and watch the quarry brought to earth.

A New Start
 A 27-year-old mother, Mrs. Besie Johnson Cheffield of Carthage Rt. 1, who had been tried the previous week for public drunkenness and neglect of her four small children, received her sentence Monday after deferral for a week. Judge Rowe continued judgment in her case on condition that she refrain from drinking intoxicants, and that she and her husband, now home again after serving a road sentence, cooperate in caring for their family. He recommended that they move to a different neighborhood and "start life anew."

CARTHAGE NEWS

Sorosis
 Mrs. Colin G. Spencer, Jr., and Mrs. Ted Frye were hostesses to the Carthage Sorosis Thursday evening, March 13, at the home of Mrs. Spencer.

Members of the club voted to have a series of bakery sales on Saturdays at "Jane's" beginning March 22. It was agreed to send a check to the Crippled Children's fund. The club will sponsor and chaperon a group of girls from Carthage to attend dances at Fort Bragg in cooperation with a request from the Recreation Center there.

The following slate of officers were presented and elected for the new year: president, Mrs. Ed Comer; vice president, Mrs. Colin G. Spencer, Jr.; treasurer, Mrs. Roy Williamson; recording secretary, Mrs. Wendell Chaffin; and corresponding secretary, Mrs. Lloyd Isaacs.

Mrs. Claude Kennedy, chairman of public affairs, introduced the guest speaker of the evening, Mrs. Jane Middleton, member of the high school faculty, who spoke interestingly of her travels in Europe while she was a student at the University of Strasbourg in Germany.

During the social hour the hostesses served ice cream, cake, salted nuts and coffee.

Rotary Club
 The weekly meeting of the Carthage Rotary Club was held at McDonald's Cafe last Thursday evening. The after-dinner speech was made by W. D. Sabiston, a Carthage attorney, who was introduced by Dave Ginsburg.

The subject of Mr. Sabiston's speech was "How to Make a Speech."

An election of officers was held and the following Rotarians were voted to take over officially in June: president, Harvey Lee Miller, succeeding R. G. Frye; vice president, Wendell Chaffin; secretary, LaVerne Womack; sergeant-at-arms, Roy Williamson; and directors, Lee McDonald and John M. Currie.

Birth Announcement
 A daughter, Frances Pratt, was born to Lieut. and Mrs. Daniel Roberts on March 14, in the Moore County Hospital. The Roberts have recently moved back to their home in Carthage from Fort Jackson, S. C. Lt. Roberts is spending a thirty-day furlough with his family before an overseas assignment in Austria.
