

Garniers Leave For Maine Coast; Home Being Built

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph L. Garnier have closed their shops at Pinehurst and will leave today (Friday) for their summer home at Kennebunkport, on the coast of Maine.

There they operate during the summer the same types of businesses they have at Pinehurst in the winter. For Mrs. Garnier, this is Louise Garnier's Hand Knits—fine custom-made dresses, suits and accessories made to her order by a battery of women workers in St. Louis, Mo. For Mr. Garnier, it is the buying and selling of curios and antiques, old books, old jewelry, portraits, manuscripts, silver, glassware—you name it, he buys it.

During their absence a home is being built for them on their lot on the Midland road, across from the former Sandhill Veterinary hospital. They expect to move into it on their return to the Sandhills on or near Labor Day.

Their daughter, Miss Mary Garnier, left Tuesday for a short visit

General Electric is growing in the Southeast

ASHEBORO, NORTH CAROLINA—NEW G-E AUTOMATIC BLANKET PLANT. Employing 500 people, this new factory will make entire output of General Electric Sleep-Guard Automatic Blankets. Dedication ceremonies, Wednesday, June 11.

ANNISTON, ALABAMA—NEW ELECTRONICS TUBE PLANT. Dedication day of $6,000,000 plant, Thursday, June 12.

DEDICATION ceremonies will be held this week for two new General Electric plants. One, at Anniston, Alabama, will manufacture electronic tubes; the other, at Asheboro, North Carolina, will make G. E.'s total output of Sleep-Guard Automatic Blankets and heating pads.

General Electric is planning still another major factory in the Southeast—a multimillion-dollar plant to build transformers at Rome, Georgia.

It's nice to be in the Southeast. After all, we have been doing business in the South for a long time. G-E plants make fluorescent lamps in Jackson, Mississippi . . . Christmas-tree lamps in Memphis, Tennessee . . . electronic tubes in Owensboro, Kentucky . . . sealed-beam headlamps in Lexington . . . home appliances in Louisville . . . and lamp wires in Goldsboro, North Carolina.

With your help these new G-E plants will continue a prosperous relationship between General Electric and the people of the South.

You can put your confidence in—

GENERAL ELECTRIC
