Eye of the Law Is On Truck Speeders

Col. W. B. Lentz, commander of the State Highway Patrol, said this week his men are eyeing trucks with renewed vigilance to prevent speeding and tailgating. Colonel Lentz's statement, which he said wasn't necessarily a "crack down," coincided with a report from Motor Vehicle Commissioner L. R. Fisher's office of numerous complaints of trucks speeding and following too closely.

Colonel Lentz also revealed the contents of a letter from Tom Outlaw, executive secretary of the North Carolina Motor Carriers association, in which the writer pledged his association's help in ridding the highways of dangerously driven trucks. He wrote: "We realize that all of our drivers are not perfect and we are determined to weed out all drivers who might not drive their vehicles in a safe and courteous manner."

Colonel Lentz said that each of the state's 30 patrol districts had been officially notified to investigate closely all cases of flagrant speeding and tailgating involving transport trucks.

The big vehicles have been the target of recurring complaints, according to Department of Motor Vehicle records. The commander said he was especially appreciative of the cooperation offered by the Motor Carriers association, which has its own corps of checkers on the highways.

The closing paragraph of Mr. Outlaw's letter will probably appeal to a great many Tar Heel motorists. It said: "We earnestly solicit constructive criticism from the general public in the event that they observe flagrant violations of safety and courtesy."

At the high point of the Mexican foot-and-mouth disease outbreak, 640 inspectors patrolled 1,900 miles of border to keep animals from entering this country.

"HAPPY ACCIDENT"

"The town of Southern Pines is a kind of happy accident here," wrote Phil Stong in his "First Road of the Land" article in October Holiday, "the place belongs in Litchfield county, Connecticut. It is a pleasant New England town stuck down here in the sand and pines. A few Yankee families settled here sixty years or so ago to escape the ruthless New England winters, and pretty soon they had built up a pleasant Connecticut or Massachusetts town, with four golf courses. It is not a 'resort' town, though it is within a few miles of the famous golf courses of Pinehurst; our double room, air conditioned, at the Belvedere cost us eight dollars."

Edwin McKeithen Gives Travel Talk At Rotary Meeting

Edwin T. McKeithen of Aberdeen was Rotary Club speaker at last Friday's luncheon meeting, held at the Village Inn. Introduced by Herbert Cameron, Mr. McKeithen told of many interesting places visited during his and Mrs. McKeithen's trip abroad this summer, weaving into his talk historical highlights pertaining to Scotland and England.

The group decided to send out written invitations to their Ladies Night party scheduled for 7 o'clock tonight (Friday) at the Garland Pierce home. The affair is to be an outdoor wiener roast, weather permitting, with Bus Doyle there to provide music and with other entertainment features as yet undisclosed.

After the regular meeting Johnnie Hall, general chairman of the Halloween Festival, and his committee met at the office of W. Harry Fullenwider for a planning session. Other members of the general committee are: Garland Pierce, Joe Garzik, Harry Fullenwider, June Phillips and Russell Lorenson.

Kiwanis Club Asks For Suggestions

The Sandhills Kiwanis club has asked the State Highway department to put additional roadside picnic tables at key points in Moore county, and the department has expressed a willingness to cooperate.

At present there are two of these tables along Highway 1 in the county, one just above Vass and the other near Drowning creek in the lower edge of the county.

The Kiwanis club would like suggestions as to where the additional tables should be located. A requirement is that they must be on a major highway.

Suggestions should be sent to John S. Ruggles, chairman of the Kiwanis Roads committee, or to Voit Gilmore, Kiwanis club president, Southern Pines, during the coming week.
