Extensive Damage
At Coffee Shop

Damage done by a flash fire in the kitchen of Holliday's Coffee Shop Wednesday morning, January 28, may amount to something over $4,000, it was learned following a visit of insurance adjuster this week.

The fire is believed to have been caused by a leak in the bottled-gas line behind one of the restaurant's large cookstoves. It sprang to the ceiling, which had recently been painted, and ran across the room. Though the volunteer fire department had it out in a half-hour, expensive electric appliances recently installed were damaged in the sudden intense heat. These included a new electric range, stainless steel refrigerator and stainless steel coffee urn. The urn had never even been connected. Whether they can be repaired satisfactorily, or must be replaced, had not been determined this week.

Though the blaze was confined to the kitchen, the dining room, renovated last November, was somewhat smacked up.

A complete renovation is in prospect before the Coffee Shop can reopen and W. B. Holliday, proprietor, said he hoped this would be completed within a week or 10 days, before the opening of the spring season here.
