Jimmy Hatch, also a high school boy, who was a passenger in the car, suffered only a few scratches.

No other car was involved. The investigating patrolman said the car skidded to the left, then to the right, turned over and rolled up against a tree. Young Propst was taken to Moore County hospital. BURNED TO DEATH

Annie Goode, aged Negro woman, was burned almost to a cinder in flames which engulfed her cottage home in Aberdeen about 11:15 a. m. Thursday.

A neighbor, noticing smoke coming from the house, called at her window but got no answer. He turned in the alarm. The firemen came promptly but the flames had made too much headway and the house was completely destroyed. Little remained of Annie's body, according to Coroner Ralph G. Steed.

The coroner returned a verdict of accidental death "unless some new evidence turns up." The aged woman was crippled, and could walk only with the use of canes. She is not known to have any living relative.

NEW NUMBER

Now Southern Pines people can call the Moore County hospital without going through "Long Distance" or paying a toll charge. A special line has been run by the Central Carolina Telephone company to give the hospital a Southern Pines number, it was announced by T. R. Howerton, administrator.

The number is 2-3551. In case of emergency, if this number is busy, the hospital may, of course, still be reached by its Pinehurst number, 5611. Both numbers ring the hospital office.

HISTORICAL

(Continued from Page 1) evening. The membership, present some 75 strong, approved the project and undertook the appeal for the additional needed funds. Cabin Is Gift

This week Mrs. Ives was able to announce that the cabin's owners, James Allen of Star and Vernon Hogan of Norman, had said that, while they would not consider a commercial sale for the log house, they will make a free gift of it to the Historical society for the restoration project.

This, however, does not obviate the necessity for raising the full $1,000, said Mrs. Ives, if the Woodland Foundation's grant is to be made available. It will take the whole $2,000, she estimated, to do a satisfactory job of moving, reconstructing and putting in appropriate order the combination cook-house and weaving-house, as desired.

Once it is located on the Shaw House grounds, it will provide an authentic setting for the fine old loom and the collection of pots, pans, trivets, etc., of colonial times which are now owned by the association.

The house is 24 feet long by 14 feet wide, with doors opposite each other in two sides, a big old stone chimney and a hearth for cooking. It is of the type the pioneer family used as a home until the larger house could be built, after which it continued in use for cooking, and for the weaving of all the cloth the family used.

Donations Asked

Donations from all persons interested in preserving this authentic bit of Moore County history, in a manner which will insure its being seen and enjoyed by hundreds of people every year, are now being asked. Checks may be sent to Norris L. Hodgkins, Jr., treasurer, at Southern Pines.

Last week's meeting concluded the season for the association, which will not meet again until the fall.

County History

Another project of immediate interest on which the membership took action was that of the writing of a history of Moore by a professional historian. E. T. McKeithen of Aberdeen has been in charge of preliminary work for the county history, and with R. E. Wicker of Pinehurst, has gathered a large amount of assorted material. Other members of his committee have helped, with each being assigned a different period of history as his field of work.

Reporting to the membership, Mr. McKeithen said they had reached the point where a trained researcher and writer should take over. He told of a conference with Blackwell Robinson, an instructor in the history department at the University of North Carolina and an authority on colonial times in the State.

Mr. Robinson visited the county the previous Sunday to discuss the project, and was willing to undertake it, Mr. McKeithen said. Mrs. Ives had offered to lend him her home, Paint Hill Farm, for the summer. No terms had been discussed, however, and the chairman said he doubted if the work could be completed in a summer.

Payment Authorized

The membership by voice vote approved a continuation of the discussion, and the payment of any sum up to the present limit of the treasury, $800. If more is needed, the directors were authorized to solicit the membership for the amount required, within reason.

Mrs. Katherine S. McColl, reporting on the cookbook project, said that a number of good recipes were on hand but that more are needed. She asked that the members jot down their best recipes on a postcard and mail them to her.

Mrs. Ives expressed the hope that next year a program for the schoolchildren might be planned, such as the pageants and other events held in former years to stimulate their interest in local history.

"Bride Tree"

She expressed thanks to Mrs. C. W. Smith, Miss Helen Butler and others who have worked in the memorial garden and herb garden of the Shaw House. She revealed that, after the wedding reception recently held there by General and Mrs. Wicks for their daughter, Mrs. Wicks had planted a "bride tree" and the groom's mother had given an 1840 lamp and lampshade.

"There is a great deal of love going into this little place," said Mrs. Ives in conclusion. "It is truly a living memorial to the past—pretty, friendly and kind, for all of us and many others to enjoy."

The meeting was followed by an outdoor supper—country ham, fried chicken and all the trimmings—prepared by Mrs. L. D. McDonald.

Mr. Saunders was a member of the Governor's special committee for studying the state highway program, and making recommendations for expansion and re-districting. The committee's recommendations for 14 districts instead of 12 as heretofore, were accepted by the Governor and the appointments to the leadership posts followed within a few days.

TOWN COUNCIL

Advertisements Planned

He named Mr. Gilmore chairman, Mr. Patch and Mr. Burns to a committee for securing and screening applicants. A salary ceiling of $7,000 was set and plans formulated to advertise in the state dailies and also the weekly bulletin of the International City Managers association.

(Several applications came in this week, it was learned from Chairman Gilmore.)

Mr. Burns was asked to serve as acting city manager, and all the councilmen expressed their regard for his service in the past, and also for his fine attitude in a somewhat touchy situation. Mr. Burns has served the town for 26 years.

Businessmen all, the councilmen then buckled down to routine matters in businesslike fashion.

They set the mayor's salary right where it has been for years—$600 a year; also those of the councilmen—nothing.

They changed the regular meeting night to the second Tuesday, rather than the second Wednesday, of each month, on account of some conflicts.

They approved two ordinances instituted by the old board, one designating Southern Pines a bird sanctuary and the other making Bennett a "stop" street at Vermont avenue.

For a Tidy Town

They discussed garbage collection, and agreed with Mr. Gilmore's expressed views that a tidy town was more a matter of education and civic pride than of cracking down with the law.

Mayor Clark appointed Mr. Gilmore a committee of one to speak before the two garden groups and enlist their cooperation in an education program.

They discussed enforcement of downtown parking laws and voted to ask the cooperation of the public in stricter observance of the two-hour time limit, requesting Mr. Burns to ask the police to warn all new offenders, and to fine repeaters.

Referred To Manager

On Mr. Patch's bringing up the subject of fortified wine, with a proposal that the stronger types might be banned by law without affecting the sale of the lighter wines, Mr. Gilmore read from the "Bible": "When important action is proposed, it is referred to the city manager who then gathers together all available information for presentation to the council, and places it on the agenda for the next regular meeting."

Acting Manager Burns was asked to undertake this study.

Adjourning, the council made no plans to meet before the next regular date. However, the members were called together by Mr. Burns Monday afternoon, to sign final papers for the issuance of city bonds—$20,000 for the purchase of the new fire truck and equipment, and $10,000 for enlargement of the sewer system where old pipes have become overloaded near McDeeds Creek. Both of these were approved by the voters last November.
