Gilmore Sees Young Queen As Hope Of British

The British see in their love of and enthusiasm for their new queen a symbol of all their old greatness and a potential renewal of that greatness, Voit Gilmore, of Southern Pines, told the Sandhills Kiwanis club at its meeting on Wednesday in the Southern Pines Country club.

Mr. Gilmore, recently returned from London, gave the club members a glowing picture of Queen Elizabeth. He was most impressed, he said, by the complete spirit of devotion to their monarch by the English people, and its engendering of "a fever of excitement around the world." He termed the young Queen a "heavenly figure."

The Gilmores witnessed the coronation parade from "medium-priced $60 seats" in stands on a corner of Hyde Park which, though the ceremony was not scheduled until 11 a.m., they were required to occupy by 7. "We had to get up at 5, but found everyone else also up and ready. It was just like midday. It reminded me of Duke-Carolina football game, the thousands upon thousands of people hurrying to their seats."

After witnessing the coronation ceremony over television, and seeing the ensuing parade in the afternoon, the Gilmores walked past Buckingham Palace and saw the royal family assembled on the balcony waving to the crowds. They had previously seen young Prince Charlie peering—and saluting—from his window in the palace, periodically hauled back by a nurse.

"A return to the peace and prosperity of the Elizabethan era is the hope of the British, and their devotion to their Queen may lead to a realization of this," Gilmore concluded.
