Livestock Loans

Now Available At Moore FHA Office

Applications for livestock loans under the federal drought disaster program can now be made to the Farmers Home Administration office at Carthage, C. C. Lingerfelt, FHA county supervisor, said this week.

The committee which administers the general FHA program in Moore County, has been appointed to supervise the livestock loan program. Members of this committee are O. U. Alexander, John M. Blue and William M. McLeod.

Loans are available for disaster situations involving all kinds of livestock, provided other qualifying conditions are met, Lingerfelt said. Loans can be made for farmers to buy livestock to replace those they had to sell because of drought; also to buy feed not available now because of the drought; and under other conditions.

Details may be obtained at the FHA office in the courthouse at Carthage.
