THEATRES SUNRISE

Universal-International's production of "Stranger in My Arms," in CinemaScope, based on the popular novel "And Ride A Tiger" by Robert Wilder, presents an impressive cast headed by June Allyson, Jeff Chandler, Sandra Dee, Charles Coburn, Mary Astor, Peter Graves and Conrad Nagel. The picture arrives Sunday and Monday at the Sunrise theatre.

Produced by Ross Hunter and directed by the distinguished award winning German film maker, Helmut Kautner, the screenplay offers a drama in which Miss Allyson is torn between her faithfulness to the memory of a husband lost in war, and the flesh-and-blood appeal of a man who was her husband's war time companion. She is seen as Christina Beasley, a young widow whose entire life is dominated by her mother-in-law, portrayed by Miss Astor.

Jeff Chandler, easily one of the screen's busiest leading men, had just finished a co-starring assignment with Esther Williams and Rossana Podesta in "Raw Wind in Eden," filmed in Italy, when he was summoned for the "Stranger in My Arms" role, in which he portrays Pike Yarnell, a former Air Force pilot of the Korean War.

Berry, Mrs. deBerry is now at home from the hospital and getting along nicely.

Miss Emmaday Collins, accompanied by her brother, Harold A. Collins, Jr., attended a dance last Friday night given by Mr. and Mrs. James Lide Coker at their home in Hartsville, S. C., honoring their son Jimmy, who was at home from Woodbury Forest school.

Leading the hitting for the Knights were Watkins, Jim Carter and Melva Hall, with Carter

Grand Chal Beats Bin Junior In Carolina Cup Race

Grand Chal, the 1958 timber division champion, found last year's form in Camden Saturday and captured the Carolina Cup by 10 full lengths over a grueling three mile course.

In doing so, the Alfred H. Smith entry from Upper Marlboro, Md., earned revenge over Bin Junior, owned by Mrs. M. G. Walsh of Southern Pines, who had bested the champion nine-year old chestnut gelding the previous Saturday in the Stoneybrook Steeplechase here.

Bin Junior was second in the race for the Carolina Cup. Carolina Hills, also an entry here, was third.

Miss Nancy Sweet-Escott's entry, Troublemaker II, a winner here in the Stoneybrook, won the big flat race.

The race opened with Grand Chal laying off the pace next to last in the field of six. He came on strong at the last hurdle, however, and streaked home 10 lengths ahead of Bin Junior for the $650 first prize money. Bin Junior took $200 and Carolina Hills got $100.

Another Walsh entry, Kingsbury, took the co-featured Springdale Cup over two miles of brush, with Another Hyacinth, owned by Mrs. William D. Hall, and Repeat Mandate, owned by Randolph Rouse, in second and third, respectively.
