ICC HEARING STARTS

Railroad Merger To Help Service, President Says

Seaboard Air Line Railroad President John W. Smith said Monday at Richmond, Va., in a statement prepared for an Interstate Commerce Commission hearing that a merger of his line with the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad would cut expenses by $38,700,000 a year.

Smith said the saving would put the merged railroad on a sound financial basis and enable it to give modern, efficient service to areas now served by the two lines.

A hearing on the application for merger started Monday before ICC examiner Hyman J. Blond of Washington. In addition to officials and attorneys for the Seaboard and ACL, representatives of the Southern Railway, chief opponent of the merger, and other groups were present.

Smith testified that "the two lines complement and parallel each other in a remarkable degree." He said the merger would be in the public interest because "it will produce more efficient and economical transportation."

Smith said that while the merger would abolish about 4,300 jobs, 5,700 jobs would become available during a five-year period through normal job turnover. Most of the displaced employees could be absorbed in the turnover process, he said.

Smith said the merged railroad would reduce costs by eliminating excess track. He said 108 miles would be saved between Tampa and Montgomery and 81 miles between Tampa and Columbus.

Further savings would be realized by combining terminal operations at such common points as Richmond, Wilmington, Charleston, Jacksonville, Tampa, Atlanta, Montgomery and Birmingham, Smith said.

In a letter to the Southern Pines town council, published in The Pilot last week, Smith said that passenger service to this area would not be cut by the merger and that wheel and axle work for the merged line, as well as repair of roadway maintenance equipment, would be concentrated at Hamlet.

The town council endorsed the proposed merger in October, but at its November meeting voted to rescind the endorsement unless assurance was forthcoming that service to this area would not be curtailed by the merger.

Further action on the matter is expected from the council.

THEATRES SUNRISE

Beautiful Lana Turner returned to the scene of her greatest screen triumph when she accepted producer Ross Hunter's offer to head an all-star cast in Universal-International's "Portrait In Black," set to open here Sunday at the Sunrise Theatre.

It was at that studio over a year ago that Miss Turner had starred in "Imitation of Life," a movie that was destined to become one of the most popular and highest-grossing in the studio's 44-year history. For Lana it represented the most rewarding performance of her entire career.

"Portrait in Black" is a modern-day suspense story set in San Francisco. Based on the Broadway play by Ivan Goff and Ben Roberts, it was adapted for the screen by the original authors. Contrary to accepted Hollywood customs of presenting suspense dramas in black-and-white, low-key photography, "Portrait in Black" is a vivid presentation of lush, expensive settings and beautiful clothes and jewels photographed in color. Sharing the star roster with Lana Turner are Anthony Quinn, Richard Basehart, Sandra Dee, John Saxon, Lloyd Nolan, Anna May Wong, Ray Walston and Virginia Grey.
