

SAL Directors Hold Fall Meeting In Pinehurst

'Merger On Way' Is Official Hint

The Board of Directors of the Seaboard Air Line Railroad held the fall meeting of this group in Pinehurst Tuesday.

Following a bountiful lunch in the Crystal Room of the Carolina Hotel, Jesse Smith, president of the railroad, made a short address. Mr. Smith spoke of the fact that among the assembled guests were the president and chief officers of the Atlantic Coast Line railroad and spoke with enthusiasm of a "merger in the offing."

"We are delighted to have these gentlemen with us today. We all used to glare at each other like tomcats," chuckled the Seaboard official, "but I want to tell you that they're really very nice people!"

Following a few other remarks including welcoming words to all guests, Mr. Smith introduced representative Alton A. Lennon of the second district and then Representative A. Paul Kitchin of the eighth district. As he introduced Mr. Kitchin, Mr. Smith quipped with utmost emphasis: "I'm just asking him for a very terse and very brief address," bringing laughter from his audience.

Mr. Kitchin spoke briefly as instructed, confining his remarks to praise of the Sandhills. He closed by saying that "when you get to Pinehurst and Southern Pines you reach the apex—you are mingling with the best."

Among local guests observed were Representative H. Clifton Blue of Aberdeen, Richard S. Tufts, president of Pinehurst, Inc., Mayors E. M. Medlin and John S. Ruggles of Aberdeen and Southern Pines, Town Manager Francis F. Rainey, J. Talbot Johnson and Lawrence Johnson of Aberdeen, Ward Hill of CP&L, R. M. Cushman of Amerotron, N. L. Hodgkins, Sr., and N. L. Hodgkins, Jr., president and vice-president of the Citizens Bank & Trust Company.

While livestock production in North Carolina has increased in recent years, markets for livestock have increased even faster.

IF APPROVED BY VOTERS TUESDAY

Here's What State Proposes to Do With Money From 10 Bond Issues

Following are short summaries of the capital improvements—buildings and other facilities—to be undertaken by the State if voters approve 10 bond issues totalling $61,065,000 in an election to be held Tuesday, November 7.

Information about local voting and other aspects of the bond election appears in a front page story. In an editorial on page 2, The Pilot urges a "For" vote on all 10 of the proposed bond issues.

1. CAPITOL AREA BUILDINGS ($2,858,000)—The amount is to be used for constructing a new State office building costing $2,800,000 and a Surplus Property building. The new office building is needed to relieve overcrowding in present State office buildings, to give up space now leased by the State in several buildings in Raleigh and to vacate buildings described as "definitely substandard and actually hazardous." The amount of $58,000 is assigned from this bond issue for a warehouse building to display and sell State surplus property. Facilities now being used for this purpose are inadequate and are on land that must be used for other purposes.

2. STATE TRAINING SCHOOLS ($1,110,000)—With population in these already overcrowded rehabilitation schools for juveniles increasing at 13 per cent per year, the funds would provide accommodations for 150 additional students, classrooms for 300 students and would relieve overcrowded conditions. The bond issue is called "an investment in rehabilitation and character building for the untaught and misguided young people of our state who have acute behavior problems." (The proposed bond issue, incidentally, would provide $287,000 for the Morrison Training School at Hoffman, to be used for additional space for 50 boys, two staff cottages and an addition to an existing dormitory.)

3. STATE EDUCATIONAL INSTITUTIONS ($31,008,000)—North Carolina is making progress in higher education, but more of our young people should continue their education beyond the high school. In 1960, North Carolina ranked 46th among the states in expansion of higher education systems during the preceding 10 years. Enrollment in North Carolina colleges is expected to increase by nearly 50 per cent by 1970. The state therefore, faces a compelling need for construction of dormitories, classroom buildings, crop research facilities, medical education facilities, student centers and other essential physical improvements on senior college campuses and schools for the blind and deaf.

4. COMMUNITY COLLEGES ($1,483,000)—The growth of community colleges is one of the most significant developments affecting education in North Carolina during recent years. They bring two years of college education within the reach of thousands at low cost and open the door to a full college education to many. The bond money is to be allocated on an equal matching basis with local funds.

5. ARCHIVES AND HISTORY AND STATE LIBRARY BUILDING ($2,560,000)—The library is one of several agencies housed in a structure erected in 1913 and the area of the library is only one-third of the space required. Dampness and heat in basement space are causing rapid deterioration of books and equipment.

The Department of Archives and History is crowded into a building with insufficient space for records, exhibits, workrooms and research.

The proposed building will bring together under one roof the related services and materials of both agencies which are now improperly and inadequately housed in seven different places.

6. STATE PORTS ($13,500,000)—The purpose of the State Ports bonds will be to finance site preparations and construction of three new ship berths, two new transit sheds and two new warehouses at each cargo terminal at Wilmington and Morehead City. This will increase cargo vessel capacity of each to eight ships and will provide one additional open berth. These facilities will enable N. C. ports to take care of the "business in view" for the next 10 years. The bond issue would double existing ports facilities and it is estimated that it will all be paid back to the treasury of North Carolina out of earnings over the next 25 years. North Carolina port operations are generating 12½ million dollars annually for the state's economy.

PORT FACILITIES BENEFIT STATE

Reeves Endorses Bond Issues

John M. Reeves of Pinehurst, chairman of the North Carolina State Ports Authority this week endorsed the proposed state bond issues, on which citizens of North Carolina will vote Tuesday, with particular emphasis on the issue that would finance expansion of State port facilities at Morehead City and Wilmington. Mr. Reeves' statement follows:

"Having served as chairman of the North Carolina State Ports Authority for over four years, I am in a better position to speak for the needs of the Authority than for the other items appearing on the November 7 ballot, although all have great appeal. I advise strongly the absolute necessity of our Ports Expansion program to keep pace with the competitive ports to the North and South of us.

"North Carolina has the unique position of leading the nation in three major industries—textiles, tobacco and furniture. No other state can claim leadership in more than one industry.

"In the past, North Carolina has been supporting the ports of other states; now these major industries and other smaller ones are turning to our ports, realizing the great economic value of these ports to the state's growth and economy.

"Ninety per cent of the world's greatest cities are port cities. Houston, Texas, for example, attributes its fabulous growth to the port of Houston. If the people and industries of North Carolina support our ports as the people of Texas support Houston, North Carolina will have the busiest ports on the South Atlantic Seaboard.

"Remember, too, that every penny of this State Ports bond issue of $13,500,000 will be repaid into the Treasury of North Carolina out of earnings over the

7. STATE MENTAL INSTITUTIONS ($7,396,000)—The proposed bond issue will provide urgently needed facilities to care for the mentally sick adolescents throughout the state who at the present time have no special facilities or programs. It is sound practice to spend time, money and effort in treating children and young people, if only to prevent the recurrence of adult mental illness.

The bond issue will also provide more out-patient facilities at each State mental hospital—often preventing re-hospitalization.

8. LOCAL HOSPITAL CONSTRUCTION ($500,000)—Sponsors with limited resources would be assisted from this bond issue by the Medical Care Commission in construction of urgently needed community general hospitals, health centers, schools of nursing and nursing homes. Over 3,000 additional hospital beds are needed to serve the present population and 2,600 obsolete beds demand replacement. The State is especially in need of additional facilities for the chronically ill. If supplementary State funds are not made available, a large number of urgently needed medical projects will be unable to materialize.

9. NATURAL RESOURCES CONSERVATION AND DEVELOPMENT ($961,000)—Among North Carolina's most valuable resources are park and forest lands. Their potential, becomes increasingly apparent with the accelerating demand for leisure-time activity and with the related businesses that make forest products one of North Carolina's foremost industries. The bond issue is necessary to project a long-range development program to make the State park system—now consisting of 12 parks—available to more people. Capital improvements proposed for North Carolina's forest program will provide for construction to replace makeshift, inadequate and antiquated workshop and storage buildings.

10. STATE AGRICULTURAL RESEARCH STATIONS ($289,000)—Agriculture is the backbone of North Carolina's economy. Agriculture still represents the state's greatest potential for expanding its over-all economy. The funds represented in the bond issue are needed for additional plot land, buildings and facilities at research stations operated by the N. C. Department of Agriculture. The amount will be divided between stations located in widely separated areas of the state.

next 25 years. We gave the State Treasurer last December a check for $100,000, the only time, we believe, that any State Agency has ever returned money to the State. We paid back into ports facilities a great amount of its earnings during the past six years.

"This bond issue is not a contribution by the State of its people but a sound, worthwhile investment that will pay handsome dividends and, at the same time, keep our state among the leading states in the nation.

"The State Ports Authority is a business institution, a member of the largest industry in the world—waterborne commerce.

"All good citizens are urged to support our state's economic progress."
