Everett Case Not Heard Last Week

A number of cases were continued when the November term of Superior Court ended at Carthage early last Friday afternoon, one of them being the second-degree murder case against Alex Everett, 82.

The old man had been indicted by the grand jury earlier in the week for the fatal shooting of Henry Boggs, formerly of Southern Pines, last September 6. Released under $2,500 bond, he will continue under this bond and is not expected to leave his small farm on Carthage, Route 3, where he has lived a hermit-like existence for many years. He claims he shot Boggs, aged about 50 in self-defense.

Few believe Everett will draw the maximum of 30 years on the murder charge. The minimum is two years.

Reports on other Superior Court cases appeared in last week's Pilot and also are on other pages of today's paper.

Now a revolutionary solution to a delicate problem. The base of the form is a shaped mound of soft pliable plastic foam. Sealed to this base is a thin, washable plastic shell from which air is removed and a self-sealing liquid injected to match the normal breast. The liquid responds rapidly and appearance silently to the slightest motion—it's so natural even you can forget. The entire form is enclosed in an easily laundered nylon cover for insertion into the pocket of any bra desired. Developed in concert with leading surgeons. Ask about TruLife today.

Wellman Tells Historical Association About Work in Writing Moore History

Manly Wade Wellman, of Chapel Hill, came back to his old stamping-ground, Moore County, Tuesday night to be the speaker at the fall meeting of the Moore County Historical Association. The meeting was held in the council room of the Town Hall.

As the first meeting of the season, it was also the first meeting to be presided over by the new president, Norris L. Hodgkins, Jr.

Author Wellman gave the audience a rundown on the history of Moore County on which he is now at work. This will be Mr. Wellman's thirty-sixth publication, he told the members, and his third county history. He spoke with enthusiasm of the present work, saying he had undertaken it largely because of his great love of Moore County which had increased as he had poured over its past records. He described graphically the many difficulties encountered in such work: pouring over records, letters and deeds. He spoke especially of the great source of knowledge to be found in the census records of the past.

"You get caught up in the lives of all those people," he said, "and, feeling at home in Moore County as I do, I find writing this history is a particularly enriching, enlivening experience."

Wellman mentioned Faulkner and Jesse Stuart among other authors who took single regions for their locale. Thoreau, he said, had written about Walden and made

Ground Water in Area is Adequate State Report Says

A report containing a description of ground-water conditions of Moore County was issued this week by the North Carolina Department of Water Resources.

It is entitled "Geology and Ground-Water Resources of the Fayetteville Area," which is defined as including Cumberland, Harnett, Hoke, Lee, Montgomery, Moore, Richmond, Robeson, and Scotland counties in south-central North Carolina.

About 75 per cent of the population of the Fayetteville area uses public or private ground-water supplies, requiring about 40 million gallons a day. The report suggests that ground-water use in the area may be greatly increased without danger of over-use.

The publication contains brief summaries of the geology, geology, and ground-water resources of each county of the area, covering 4,834 square miles and lying in the Piedmont and Coastal Plain provinces of the State.

With each county description are included tables of well data, water analyses, a geologic map, and a map showing the location of wells for which data are given. Records of 468 wells and chemical analyses of the water from 66 wells are presented.

The report was prepared as part of a Statewide investigation conducted cooperatively by the North Carolina Department of Water Resources and the U. S. Geological Survey. It is available to well drillers, agricultural agencies, industrial development groups, and county and municipal officials of the nine counties. Copies may be obtained by writing the North Carolina Department of Water Resources, P. O. Box 9392, Raleigh.

STORY ON TV

"The Still Valley," a story by Manly Wade Wellman who spoke here Tuesday night, will be dramatized on the "Twilight Zone" television program within the next few days. The program is seen in this area on Channel 2, Greensboro, at 10 p. m. Friday, and on Channel 11, Durham, at 6:30 p. m. Sunday. Mr. Wellman said that he wrote the story in the 1930's, receiving in payment $35 for 3,500 words at one cent each.

'Pinehurst Motor Lodge' is Name Of New Facility

The new motel on the east side of No. 1 highway, between Southern Pines and Aberdeen has been named the Pinehurst Motor Lodge.

A large sign bearing the name was erected this week at the entrance of the new facility, which is now nearing completion.

Though no opening date has yet been set and a few finishing touches remain to be put on, with landscaping of the grounds, etc., the motel received a few guests—its first—this week.

It has been accepted in advance of opening by the Quality Courts, Inc., nationwide motel organization and will soon show another sign bearing this name.

Staying there this week is the owner, B. W. Carter of Clinton, and Mrs. Carter. Mr. Carter will be in active management with a resident assistant, Mrs. Merle Davidson, formerly of Denver, Colo. Mrs. Davidson is already in residence and has entered her young son in the Southern Pines school.

The modernistic office and 28 adjoining units of the Pinehurst Motor Lodge form two sides of a hollow square on the site formerly occupied by the Starview Drive-in-Theatre. The grounds are to be planted, and a swimming pool installed in the square.

Mr. Carter was originally the contractor for the motor lodge, who in the course of the construction bought out the initial owner, W. B. Rice of Raleigh. He also has an interest in the Duke Motel of Durham, which he built, and at present is building, another motor lodge in Pennsylvania.
