Problems of Plastic Over Tobacco Plant Beds Discussed by Ag Agent

By F. D. ALLEN
County Agricultural Agent

There are a lot of farmers in Moore County who are planning on growing some of their tobacco plants under plastic this year. There are quite a few questions that are still unanswered associated with growing plants under plastic. The suggestions listed below are based on very limited experimental work and observation on farms. A grower should not use plastic on all his yardage until more experience is had with plastic.

Plant beds can be seeded two to three weeks later than normal when plastic is to be used because of the faster growth of the plants. Plants should reach transplanting size by from 60 to 70 days after seeding when grown under plastic.

The bed should be wet down between the time the seed are sown and the plastic put on. This is important so as to settle the soil around the seed and supply moisture while plastic is on.

We do not know how much ventilation is needed yet. Last year we got along without any ventilation for about five to six weeks. It seems logical, however, that, on hot clear days, some ventilation would be necessary to prevent too high temperature under the plastic. If you allow ventilation then you must be ready to begin adding water because ventilation allows faster drying. If you decide to add ventilation, then a five gallon bucket with the bottom and top out in each end of the 100 yard bed is enough.

The plastic must be kept off the plants. This can be done with an "A" frame or with a covering of straw as used to support the cotton covers. If an "A" frame is used it should be about 18 to 24 inches high in the center to prevent water from ponding on the cover. If the cover is placed on straw the plants must be watched closely when the weather begins to turn warm to see if scalding develops. If it does, the plastic will need to be raised or replaced with a cotton cover.

The size of the plants compared to the season of the year will determine how long to leave plastic cover on the plant bed. If the plastic is removed to slow down growth, the bed should be covered with a cotton cover unless it is time to begin transplanting.

Heard the word? We were third in sales in '61. Third!

It's nice to be loved.

Like we've said: "When people like a car they show it." All you have to do is put together a car that's sharper looking, smoother running and a bigger value. That's why Pontiac and Tempest stormed into third place. Why don't you see your Pontiac dealer (a very happy man these days) and go with a winner?

*Based on final, official R. L. Polk combined Pontiac and Tempest registration figures for 1961.
