Alleged Whiskey Still Owner, Operator Arrested Between Glendon and Putnam

It appeared to be an abandoned chicken house, but roosting inside was found a complete still, fired up and running, with an operator, when ABC raiders and federal agents visited it last Thursday morning.

The tank-type still of 45-gallon capacity, with jars, mash and other trimmings occupied one end of the poultry house some 350 feet in length, within sight of a farmhouse between Glendon and Putnam.

The ingeniously built distillery received water from a pipe apparently placed there some time ago for the chickens, running the length of the poultry house, with water pumped by electricity from a pond behind the farmhouse.

Arrested were James Burlin Hussey, 37, of Carthage, Route 1, owner of the farmhouse, the poultry house and pond; also Colon Clegg, an elderly Negro, found on the scene operating the still. Destroyed with the still were nine and a half gallons of whiskey and 45 gallons of mash.

The arrested men made $500 bond each set by the U. S. Commissioner at Rockingham, for their appearance there at the September term of federal court. Hussey reportedly has no previous record of whiskey law violations, said Chief Moore County ABC Officer C. A. McCallum, but Clegg was characterized as "an old offender."

Taking part in the raid were Moore ABC Officers McCallum, June Cockman and Ed Floyd, and three agents from the federal ATTD office at Rockingham.

WSCS Concludes Course
The two Circles of the Vass Methodist WSCS met on Monday and Tuesday nights of last week in the church fellowship hall for a two-part study course on "The Meaning of Suffering."

Agnes Boggs, chairman, introduced the topic which was presented by Mrs. David Moe. Mrs. H. A. Borst was in charge of the opening scripture on Monday night and Mrs. James Hudson gave a talk on "Discerning the Will of God." On Tuesday night the ladies enjoyed a covered dish supper prior to the study.

Junior - Senior Prom
"Paris in the Springtime" was the theme of the gala Junior - Senior Prom at the Vass - Lakeview high school cafeteria on Friday evening. Decorations of yellow and white, senior class colors, were prevalent throughout the hall. In keeping with the theme, David Crockett of the junior class gave the welcome, and Harrison Garner, senior class president, responded in French. Guests, in addition to the two classes and their guests, were: the school principal, John McCrummon and Mrs. McCrummon, members of the school board and their wives — Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Tyson, Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Keith, and Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Morgan; members of the high school faculty and their wives and husbands, and Miss Lynn Oldham, school secretary.

The dinner, served buffet style by the Vass Woman's club, consisted of chicken and potato salads, relish dishes, cake squares and punch.

The waiter and waitress, chosen from the sophomore class, were: Amy Callahan, Patricia Callahan, Jean and Joyce Jones, Sue Hardy, Ann Crockett, and Danny Williams.

Dancing to the music of a special band rounded out a delightful and unforgettable evening.
