Yow Ordered Held For Murder After Coroner's Inquest

At an inquest held in the courtroom at Carthage Tuesday night, a coroner's jury found that June Sullivan, 55, had come to his death by a knife wound on the evening of Monday, June 11, and recommended that Frank Yow of Carthage be held for grand jury action.

Coroner Ralph G. Steed set $5,000 bond for Yow, a plumber who has been living "off and on" at the Sullivan home, two miles south of Carthage, for the past several years, and who had been held in jail for questioning since the night of Sullivan's death. Charged with the murder, he faces trial at the August term. Sullivan was found dead in his back yard after allegedly drinking Yow took the stand at the inquest to say he recalled no argument nor anything about a knife or a stabbing. To questions of Moore Coroner Ralph G. Steed, he said "there must have been a scuffle" but as to what actually happened and why, he replied, "I don't know, I really don't know."

Yow was accused by Mrs. Rose Sullivan, wife of the deceased man, who testified that he came into the kitchen where she was, seized a butcher knife and said, "I'm going to kill the S.O.B." She followed him out the door in time to see him draw back his hand with the knife in it. Then, she said, June was lying on the ground with blood on his chest and someone said, "June is hurt." An ambulance was called, but it turned out he was dead.

Mrs. Sullivan, who admitted that she had had "three or four drinks of gin, recalled no argument but said "June must have said something, or else why would Frank have killed him?"

The two men were friends of more than 20 years' standing, though Yow testified, "I was afraid of June. We had lots of arguments and one time he put me in the hospital for a week." He had a home in Carthage but said he had been staying at Sullivan's "off and on for about a year," while Mrs. Sullivan recalled that it was about three years, and that on the Friday before the killing on Monday she had asked him to leave.

Yow is presently under suspended sentence in Moore Recorder's Court for public drunk and possession of illicit whiskey.

The only other person who had been present who was called to the stand was Gilbert (Bud) Parrish of Carthage, who said, however, that he had gone into the

A NEW KIND OF SUMMER FISH STORY

Pinehurst Boy Discovered As Photo Subject

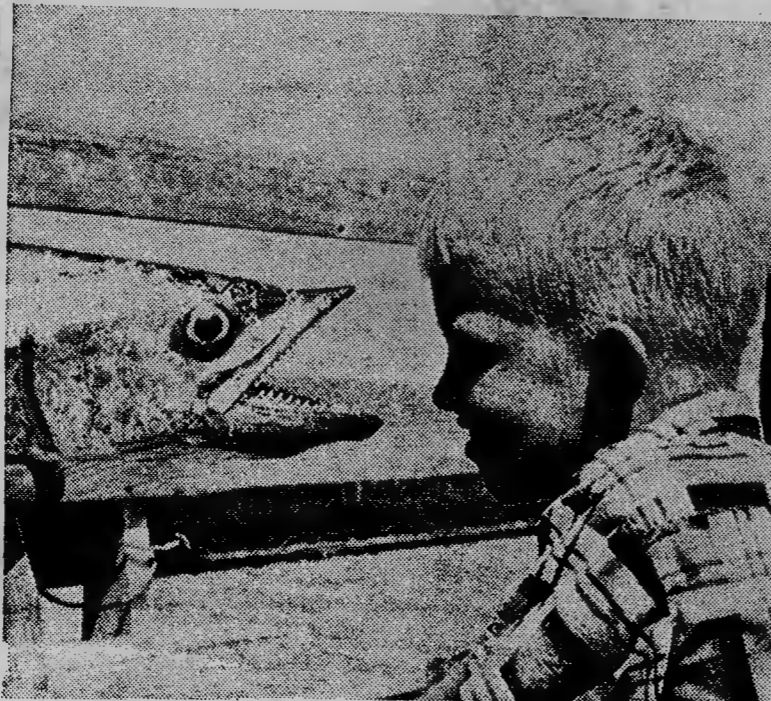

Three years ago, when Mr. and Mrs. Daniel C. Lewis and their son, Marshall Wayne, were visiting Wrightsville Beach, a photograph was made of six-year-old Marshall head-to-head with a big-eyed, sharp-toothed king mackerel, posed against the railing of the Crystal Pier.

The photographer, however, neglected to get his human subject's name. And it wasn't until a recent visit to Wrightsville Beach and the pier that Marshall, now nine years old, was identified.

During the three years, the photograph—which had turned out to be an intriguing study of boy nature and fish nature and the contrast between the two heads—had won prizes, had been published in the 1961 annual of the New Hanover Fishing Club, "Largest Fishing Club in America," of Wilmington, had received local and statewide publicity, had been on television and had been published in outdoor and sporting magazines, with an appeal made for identification of the boy.

Also, the photo was posted at the Crystal Pier, with a request that anyone knowing the boy identify him.

As John Lockfaw, president of the New Hanover Fishing Club, related the most recent chapter of the story to The Pilot, the Lewises, with Marshall Wayne, recently visited the Crystal Pier again. Fishing on the pier at the time was John Wood, a member of the board of directors of the Fishing Club. He noticed the boy pass but said later it didn't dawn on him until after he had gone

EYE TO EYE—Identity of the boy in this prize winning photograph, made three years ago at Wrightsville Beach, remained a mystery until recently when he proved to be Marshall Wayne Lewis, son of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel C. Lewis of Pinehurst. Marshall, six years old when the photograph was taken, didn't seem to mind looking a king mackerel in the eye, in spite of the fish's big mouthful of saw-like teeth.

home that night that the boy he had seen could well be the one who had posed with the mackerel.

Wood spotted the boy again on the pier the next day and then took Lockfaw to see Marshall Wayne and his family to confirm the identification. It turned out Wood was right. They had found the long-lost boy in the photo. Thereupon, Marshall Wayne was accorded an honorary membership in the New Hanover Fishing Club, was given a number of prizes and made an appearance on WECT television, Wilmington.

Marshall Wayne will be in the fifth grade of Pinehurst School this fall. He is a Cub Scout of Pack 7, plays Little League baseball and is a member of the Community Swimming Association of which his father is vice president. He attends Beulah Hill Baptist Church near Pinehurst.

Sandhill Firemen Convene at Vass; Barnes President

Some 150 persons, firemen and their wives and guests representing 21 member companies of the Sandhill Firemen's Association, enjoyed fun and fellowship at Vass despite the heavy showers yesterday.

The occasion was the annual convention of the association composed of volunteer fire departments of Central North Carolina, from Roxboro on the north to Pembroke on the south, Cumberland County (several companies) on the east to Wadesboro and Ansonville on the West.

Archie L. Barnes, Carthage fire chief, was elevated from vice-president to president at the afternoon business meeting held at the high school. Henry O'Brian, past fire chief of Roxboro, was elected vice-president, with E. P. Leatherbury of Hamlet, secretary-treasurer since 1945, returned to this office.

S. T. Dunn, assistant Southern Pines chief, was named chaplain succeeding George H. Barnes of Laurinburg, who is moving from the area to Charlotte and was accorded an honorary life membership in the association. Barnes (Continued on Page 8)

A group of about 10 young people is expected here Saturday from the counties of the 8th Congressional District to make plans for the part "Teen-Dems" can play in the upcoming political campaigns.

Ralph Hendren, Southern Pines High School student, who was elected chairman of organization for the 8th District at last week's statewide Teen-Dems convention in Raleigh, said that the district executive committee will meet at the town hall at 2 p. m. Saturday. All teen-agers interested in the Democratic party and all other interested persons are invited to attend.

Hendren said the executive committee to meet here Saturday will make plans for a rally for Rep. A. Paul Kitchin of Wadesboro, Democratic candidate for reelection as 8th District Congressman. Hendren said it is hoped the rally can be held here in October.

A Moore County Teen-Dems group is "in the planning stage," Hendren said. Representing the county with him at Raleigh Friday and Saturday was Tommy Blue of Eagle Springs whose mother, Mrs. Harold Blue, is vice chairman of the Moore County Young Democrats.

Mrs. J. P. Marley, committee chairman, in announcing the resignation, gave no explanation of the former director's action, but it was learned on good authority that financial considerations were involved.

The recreation program is continuing as planned under John Williams, school physical education director and coach, with the addition of Bill Seymour to the staff. Miss Arden Fobes is continuing as playground director for younger children, on the town park block.

Among the units training there during the annual summer encampment is Moore County's Company D, 2nd Medium Tank Battalion, 198th Armor, commanded by Capt. James E. Harrington, Jr., of Pinehurst, with headquarters in the armory on Morganton Road here.

The governor spent Tuesday night at Howard Johnson's Motor Lodge, between Southern Pines and Aberdeen, prior to an early morning, pre-breakfast trip to the encampment area where he spent the next 12 hours, returned to Howard Johnson's by helicopter late in the afternoon.

Peach Buying by Government Will Support Prices

U. S. Agriculture Department officials in Raleigh said Wednesday government buying to support sagging peach prices may begin by the end of the week.

"We are getting the mechanics set up," said A. P. Hassell, State executive director for the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Division of the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

Government buying operations were ordered in North Carolina, South Carolina and Georgia Tuesday after grower representatives appealed for assistance.

Hassell said the government will buy only U. S. No. 1, two-inch peaches at $2.35 per 3/4 bushel basket. The government-bought fruit will go into a free food program.

The grower representatives appealed for government help after a glut developed on the market. Hassell said that at Candor this past weekend there were about 20 trucks of peaches and no buyers.

ASC officials said they expected the price emergency to be only temporary. Peaches now moving to market are of the early, cling varieties, less desirable on the market than the free-stone varieties which will come along later.

Jury Trial Asked By Young Brothers Held In Robberies

Thomas B. Keehnen, 18, and James B. Keehnen, 20, soldier brothers from Fort Bragg, asked for a jury trial when they were brought into Southern Pines Recorder's Court yesterday, on charges of breaking and entering, larceny and receiving, in connection with two robberies here.

The brothers were transferred from Carthage to the local jail following their conviction Monday in Moore County Recorder's Court on larceny and receiving charges in another case. (See story, page 16).

Judge W. Harry Fullenwider set $2,000 bond each for the young men, for their appearance in the August term of Superior Court at Carthage. They could not immediately make bond, although their father is expected to come here from Clarksville, Tenn., to make arrangements for bonding, if possible.

The brothers had admitted the larceny of a toolbox with tools, valued at about $130, from the garage of Alfred Chiswell on Weymouth Road, also of a radio-phonograph console and records from the home of Mrs. Lloyd T. Clark near No. 1 highway parkway, south, according to Police Chief Earl Seawell.

They denied breaking and entering, however, as they said both the Chiswell garage and the back door of the Clark home were unlocked. But Chief Seawell said his department has regularly checked the Clark home, which has been vacant for some time, and the door had been locked.

At Carthage, the soldiers had taken a toolbox and tools, motor (Continued on Page 8)
