Investigation Continues In Hit-Run Death Of Young Man Here On June 9

Many leads have been traced down, to no avail, and numerous other actions have been taken by the Southern Pines police department in an attempt to fix responsibility for the hit-run death of 23-year-old Paul Edward Smith on N. May St., the night of June 9.

Nobody saw an automobile hit Smith and throw him nearly 85 feet from the point of impact. Fragments of a broken headlight lens, picked up from the pavement, and the clothing worn by the victim were about all officers had to work with in starting an investigation.

Police Chief Earl S. Seawell immediately alerted the State Highway Patrol and area police to watch for an auto with damaged right front and a broken headlight. Garages and repair shops were also asked to be on the lookout. Many private cars belonging to National Guardsmen on maneuvers a few miles from Southern Pines, on the Fort Bragg reservation, were examined with cooperation of National Guard officers.

When the headlight fragments were swept up and pieced together by police, identification of the lens as a Tung-Sol 6006 sealed beam was made possible by a marking on the glass. This meant that the automobile on which it had been used had a six-volt electrical system.

Chief Seawell then determined that the following makes and years of car and all prior year models of those makes used six-volt systems: Olds, 1952; Cadillac, 1952; Buick, 1952; Pontiac, 1954; Chevrolet, 1954; Mercury, 1955; Lincoln, 1955; Ford, 1955 all Chrysler products, 1955; and Nash and Rambler, 1955. A mimeographed letter listing these models, with background information about the accident was widely circulated to garages, auto supply stores and so forth, with request that information be sent to the Southern Pines police department on autos with right headlamps out or on persons purchasing six-volt headlamps.

A number of leads were followed up without producing information that could be linked to the death of Smith.

Another avenue of investigation was followed when Smith's clothing was sent to the Washington, D. C., laboratories of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, with a request that the clothing be examined for evidence of paint, grease or other substance, that the origin of the substance be identified if possible and that blood on the clothing be typed for information that might be useful in the future.

Chief Seawell requested that the FBI information be returned to the State Bureau of Investigation at Raleigh, as SBI cooperation is being given in investigation of the hit-run death.

The FBI reports have not yet come back, Chief Seawell said.

"This case will stay open," the chief emphasized, "We want people to know that we don't quit working on a case like this, no matter how unlikely it seems we can find the car and the man responsible for Smith's death."
