4-H Girl Tells How To Care For Pressure Canner

BY DIANAH COCKMAN Elise 4-H Club, Robbins

The pressure canner is one of the most important utensils used in canning. Therefore you should be very careful in the care of it.

After each using the pressure canner should be thoroughly cleaned. Wash the kettle in hot, soapy water and dry thoroughly. Do not put the cover of the canner in water as the dial gage and vents will be damaged. To clean the lid, use a clean, damp cloth.

Keep openings to the safety valve and petcock clean. Clean by drawing a narrow strip of cloth through them. If the safety valve is the ball and socket type, it should be cleaned after each use.

A toothpick may be used in keeping the opening of the pressure gage clean. Never put the pressure gage in water.

Be careful not to add cold water to a hot canner or to put a hot canner in cold water. Such sudden changes of temperature may crack

Former Lakeview Man Succumbs In Florida

News has been received here of the death of L. B. MacWilliams, 58, former Lakeview resident, in St. Petersburg, Fla.

MacWilliams, a widely known salesman, died August 31 in his sleep at his home in St. Petersburg. Funeral services were conducted Monday in Birmingham, Ala.

For many years MacWilliams traveled as a farm equipment salesman for an Atlanta concern and was well known in the Central Carolina area. He and his family made their home for several years at Lakeview, but moved to Florida two years ago.

Surviving are his wife and a daughter, Miss Alease MacWilliams of the home, and a married daughter.

When storing the pressure canner, crumple newspapers inside to absorb moisture and odors. The lid should be wrapped in paper and turned upside down on top of the canner.

The pressure canner will last much longer and you will have much better canned food, if you care for it properly.
