Kilmer Forest Is Unique Memorial

Although "Joyce Kilmer's tree" will soon disappear from the campus of his alma mater, an entire forest deep in the North Carolina mountains flourishes in memory of the soldier-poet who wrote "Trees."
The stately white oak which inspired the poem is on the campus of Rutgers University in New Brunswick, N. J., where it was announced recently that the tree would have to be cut down because all efforts to save it from the ravages of old age had failed. Nature lovers and the millions of others familiar with Kilmer's poetry are reassured by the fact that in Joyce Kilmer Memorial Forest a 3,800-acre tract of hardwoods and evergreens in Nantahala National Forest has been set aside since 1936 to stand for all time as a living monument.

The entrance to Joyce Kilmer Memorial Forest is 15 miles northwest of Robbinsville, North Carolina, and accessible from U. S. Highway 129 by a Forest Service road terminating in a cool glade where there is a picnic area. Along more than 20 miles of marked hiking trails originating here, visitors to Joyce Kilmer Forest can explore one of the most impressive virgin forests in America.

'Special Week On Aging' Set For September 15-21

Governor Terry Sanford has designed the week of September 15-21, 1963, as the Special Week on Aging. The special week, sponsored by the Governor's Coordinating Committee on Aging, is set aside each year to honor the aging within the State.

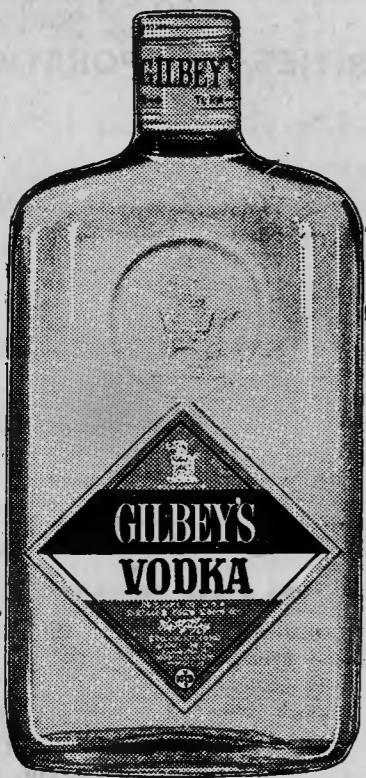

Needs and opportunities for North Carolina's approximately 335,000 citizens who are 65 years of age or older will be highlighted during this week.
County committees will sponsor special events and homes for the aging will hold open house. This week will stress further study of the needs of these older citizens and the provision of more opportunities for community service, for suitable living arrangements, for employment opportunities, for recreation activities, for Social Security and other benefits for the aged citizens.

Among the events planned are picnics, concerts, bus trips special exhibits of handicrafts, and other activities.

Georgia was the leading pulpwood producer in the South in 1962 for the fifteenth consecutive year. The state's harvest was 5.2 million cords. Alabama was second with 3.4 million cords, and South Carolina, Florida, North Carolina, Mississippi and Louisiana each cut more than two million cords.

Mrs. Evans Dies Suddenly At Home

Mrs. Elizabeth McCaskill Evans of Carthage died suddenly Thursday morning of last week at her home.

Surviving are her husband, James F. Evans; two sisters, Miss Bess McCaskill of Carthage and Miss Myrtle McCaskill of Raleigh; three brothers, W. J. McCaskill of Pinehurst and M. E. and Clinton C. McCaskill, both of Carthage.

Funeral services were conducted Friday at Eureka Presbyterian Church by the pastor, the Rev. Daniel Norman, assisted by the Rev. W. S. Golden and the Rev. J. D. Hales. Burial was in Union Church Cemetery.

In a pinch you can cut a half-inch band of rubber from a heavy truck inner tube and use it as a temporary replacement for a broken fan belt. It'll work if you drive very slowly and cautiously.
