Sou. Pines School News

By NANCY LELAND

Plans for 'Lance'
Tuesday brought the almost unexpected arrival of the layout artist for this year's "Lance." There was a slight mix-up which led the artist to think that he was needed in Southern Pines as early as possible. Thus the editors had a time deciding upon an original theme, style and arrangement on such short notice, but the foundations upon which the annual will be built are well under way.

Elections Delayed
The class officers of the high school were to have been elected last Wednesday, but due to lack of time, the elections in all but the sophomore class were incomplete. I hope to have this information by next week, so have patience with the rest of us.

Debating Team
The Debating Team, under the direction of Miss Gail Miller, has formed again this year, and meets every Tuesday night, consisting of students who are asked to become members. Here they can argue as much as they will, and have a legitimate excuse.

Actually, a debate is much more than an argument, and these students use much of their time doing research for their topics, because their argument for or against a topic must be based upon proven facts. The officers of this group are:

president, David Jones; vice president, Janet Phillips; secretary, Molly McConnell; and treasurer, Ian Gouldsbrough.

On October 25-26 a conference will be held at Chapel Hill, to which two delegates from Southern Pines will be sent. The two delegates will be Charles McLaughlin and Bobby Hiatt, and their topic is, "What Should Be The Policy of the Federal Government in Giving Medical Care to the Citizens of the United States?"

The other members participating on the team are: Jeanne Allred, Janice Campbell, Gerry Gilmore, Steve Grant, Maureen Hasenfelt, Barbara and Marie Hurst, Steve Kelly and Janet McPherson.

More power to them.

FHA Supper
The FHA will hold a pot-luck supper tonight at 5:30 in the Home Ec Department. The purpose of the event is to welcome all newcomers to the club. A good attendance is expected.

Pep Rally
There will be a pep rally tonight at the football field, preceding tomorrow's game against St. Pauls. The boys played a great game last week, and in spite of a number of injuries sustained in that game and elsewhere, the Knights have kept their promise to make us proud of them. I know they will tomorrow, too.

PRACTICAL NURSE

miliar with the wide variety of skilled procedures practical nurses are now called upon to perform. The students have been working three days per week in the hospital, while continuing with two days also in the classroom.

Goal of the students is graduation in April of next year and State Board examinations that will qualify them as licensed practical nurses. The examination program has been set up by both the State Board of Education and the State Board of Nursing.

Once certified as licensed practical nurses, the graduates will be qualified to work in the hospital or on private duty, anywhere they choose to go, but all are likely to continue to work in this area where they have homes and families.

The course they are taking recognizes a revolution in nursing which has seen registered nurses confined more and more to administrative and supervisory duties and bedside care taken over by trained practical nurses—what Mrs. Mock calls the "upgrading of the practical nurse's role."

In this new role, licensed practical nurses are qualified to give medication, under supervision, and perform many other functions formerly done exclusively by the registered nurse.

To broaden their training, the students in the Lee Center-Moore Memorial course are rotated in various departments of the hospital—medical, surgical and pediatric, becoming familiar with all phases of patient care.

While the students pay a fee for their training, it is relatively small, in line with policy for all State-regulated technical training and vocational courses. One of the students, Mrs. Mary Small of West Southern Pines, who had served as a nurse's aide at Moore Memorial with exceptional ability before entering the course, was provided a full scholarship for the training by the hospital's Woman's Auxiliary.

Both patients and hospital personnel are reported pleased with the performance of the 20 trainees.

Based on the success of the current course, others are planned by the Lee Center for the future, in cooperation with other hospitals in the area or with Moore Memorial again, if the interest warrants.

BENEFITS FOR WIDOWS

Since July 1, 1960, widows of World War II or of the Korean Conflict veterans have been eligible to receive pensions on the same basis as World War I widows. In brief, the deceased husband had to have at least 90 days of service of which part was during wartime. He must have been discharged under conditions other than dishonorable and the widow's annual income must be within statutory limits. Individual details may be received at any VA office.

MOORE LEADERS

Dock Smith, Robbins. Some of these people have been working regularly with the blood program. Others are new to it.

—There must be more emphasis on the program as a county-wide project, less emphasis on what each community gives. This means that people must be encouraged to give in another town, if they can't give in their own.

To this end, the county-wide schedule of bloodmobile visits, for as much as a year in advance, should be published and posted and brought to people's attention in all possible ways.

—To tie in with the county-wide emphasis, there should be a county committee, with representatives from all local town committees, to gauge and encourage progress on the program for the county as a whole.

—Groups who give comparatively little blood now should be reached in all possible ways and encouraged to give. These include rural residents and the Negro population of the county.

—Methods to assure that "replacement donors" meet their pledges—as many of them are not now doing—should be devised. (See another item on this page, "Why Is The Blood Program Failing?")

Suggestions to accomplish this aim ranged from having them arrested for false pretense to having the person who received the blood see that the "replacement donor" gave blood, as pledged.

Some replacement donors, it was noted, have signed several pledges to give blood in a short time—more than they could possibly fulfill.

Both physicians and hospital personnel testified at the meeting that the loss of the blood program would be a catastrophe from a medical standpoint. Hospitals would have to attempt to maintain their own blood banks, facing many difficulties in equipment, handling of donors that would require presence of physicians and nurses, and in getting rare types of blood which are now obtainable on short notice from the Charlotte center. Loss of the Red Cross blood program would endanger lives in the county's hospitals, it was agreed and would jeopardize the county's status as a growing medical center.

While the suggestion was made that the program might benefit from centralizing collection points for blood, combining collections from several towns at one central point, it was stated by Red Cross officials that a steady flow of blood throughout the year is needed by the Charlotte center and that is why the collections are made more often, at various points.

Determination
There was an obvious determination among the group at the Carthage meeting to try to save the program, but many of them, long experienced as workers in connection with bloodmobile visits, held no illusions about the difficulties involved. Overcoming public apathy and unwillingness to give, even when people are informed about bloodmobile visits, is no easy task, they pointed out.

There was a suggestion also that the Red Cross office could be more diligent in its paper work. Though Chairman Hauser said that every person who has given blood is notified by mail when and where he is due to give again, to renew his six-months credit card, one man who said he was a regular donor asserted that he had never, in several years, received such a notice.

Among the persons contributing to the discussion were: Dr. J. C. Grier, Jr., of Pinehurst, Dr. R. J. Dougherty and Dr. P. P. Green, of Southern Pines, and Dr. R. L. Felton of Carthage, physicians; Duncan McGoogan, administrator of Moore Memorial Hospital; Timothy Cleary, member of the Pinebluff board of commissioners; Luke Marion, Carthage businessman; T. Clyde Auman of West End, chairman of the blood program in that area; Don Walter of Southern Pines; Sonny Gaiton of Aberdeen, representing the Jaycees who sponsor the bloodmobile visits there; Mrs. I. T. Wyche of Pinehurst, of the Auxiliary of Moore Memorial Hospital; A. B. official, William Caton of Southern Pines and others.

6TH GRADERS

in the county whose schools are not sending vehicles can obtain transportation if they will come to the East Southern Pines school at 9 a. m., it was stated.

Mr. Hazlehurst this week was attempting to reach all the county's schools, both white and Negro, with invitations to send delegations of sixth graders. All students going must have permission of parents, he said.

Headquarters for the Kids Day activity at Pope will be the Base Operations Area. Parents wishing to take their own children to Pope AFB in private transportation may do so, Mr. Hazlehurst said.
